Tougher Labor Laws Sure in B.C.

Strike Curbs Likely

By PETER BRUTON

Tougher labor legislation will be introduced by the provincial government later this session, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson indicated yesterday.

Observers believe the legislation will include provisions cancelling the payroll check-off of union dues and steps to make it harder for unions to strike and employers to lock-out.

BOTE SIDER

Mr. Peterson, speaking on labor-management relations, told the legislature there were activities on the part of both employers and unions that were not conducive to harmonious relations.

"Other activities unduly restrict the freedom of the individual and, in our view, violate his basic democratic rights," said the minister. "In certain instances, some degree of corrective action is within the authority of this legislature, and legislation covering these and other matters will be placed before you for your consideration as early as possible."

FIRM OPINION

The minister, who took over the department after the defeat of former minister Lyle Wicks in the last election, said he was firmly of the opinion there should be as little government interference as was compatible with the public welfare.

"However, we have a responsibility to every individual, whether he is a member of a union or not," said Mr. Peterson. "We will not shrink from our own responsibility to protect the basic and democratic rights of a free people."

MORE SPECIFIC

CCF members in the opposition asked the minister to be more specific about what the legislation would entail but he refused to do so.

"I know the opposition will try to misinterpret any legislation brought in about labor," said Mr. Peterson. "Just as they misinterpreted the Labor Relations Act."

"But we will be fair to labor, we will be fair to management, we will be fair to the public of this province," he said.

STACY STAND

There has been widespread speculation that more labor legislation would be introduced since former agriculture minister Newton Stacy told a delegation of farmers that Bill 43 (Trade Unions Act) was "just the beginning" and that "tougher laws were being planned."

At that time Premier Bennett denied the Social Credit government had ever passed any legislation which hurt the working man.

Mr. Peterson said yesterday there was bound to be a conflict of interest between labor and management but it was a great mistake to assume that labor and management must always have diametrically opposed interests and that unions and management should be engaged in a class war.

"These who perpetuate class warfare between labor and management are doing a very great disservice to the people of B.C.," he said.

Record 30 Inches Dumped by Clouds

PORT ALBERNI—Precipitation here during January set an all-time record of 30 inches, according to weather observer Colin Wilson of McCoy Lake.

He said it was the highest January figure since records were started here in 1887. Heavy rainfalls caused extensive flooding in the area.

Last Ship Contract Slides into Sea

By IAN STREET

The shipbuilding industry on the west coast is in danger of "disintegrating overnight" because there is no work to keep skilled craftsmen here, Harold

Husband, president of Victoria Machinery Depot, said here yesterday.

If this is allowed to happen, Mr. Husband told guests assembled for the launching of the new destroyer escort Saskatchewan at VMD, the task of rebuilding the industry "will be a long and arduous one."

He said the yard—"one of the most efficient shipbuilding organizations in Canada"—has no shipbuilding work in hand when the Saskatchewan moves to Yarrow's Ltd., in a few weeks for its completion.

"We can't, like Mr. Mitrow, wait for something to turn up," said Mr. Husband. "We are encouraged by the decision of the B.C. government to build a third ferry ... and the recently announced new federal shipbuilding program."

BODY LEFT IN GUTTER AFTER FATAL HIT-RUN

Bloody Clothing May Hold Clue

A bundle of torn and bloodstained clothing may hold the only clue to the identity of a hit-run driver who last night took the life of Victoria's second 1961 traffic death victim.

The broken body of 33-year-old Hubert H. Hollier, 2336 Lee, was left lying in the gutter along rain-slick Fort Street 100 feet west of Trent.

NO WITNESSES

Up to early this morning police had found no eyewitnesses to the fatal accident.

Examination of the road surface failed to produce any telltale shattered headlight glass or other evidence.

Police are pinning their hopes on the conscience of the driver and, failing that, the possibility that microscopic flakes of the death-car's paint may be imbedded in the victim's clothing.

BOTTLE OF BRANDY

Ironically, Hollier was on his way to buy a bottle of medicinal brandy which he needed to combat a heart condition.

Police said that if he was in the nearest pedestrian lane when struck he was bowled and dragged some 100 feet by the fleeing car.

First report of the fatal accident was received by city police from Mrs. Lloyd Briggs, 1938 Fort, who lives just a few feet from where Hollier's body was found a few minutes before 6 p.m.

HEARD A THUD

"We were sitting in the living room when we heard a thud and a roaring car engine," she said.

Her husband looked out the window, saw the victim's lifeless form on the wet street and called to his wife to telephone police. He failed to catch sight of the vehicle.

Within seconds an all-points police bulletin covering the Victoria to Campbell River portion of Vancouver Island flashed out over police radio frequencies.

SEVERELY HAMPERED

But from the outset police were severely hampered by lack of any description of the vehicle.

Service stations were alerted in the Greater Victoria area to watch for a vehicle bearing fresh front-end damage but with headlights probably still intact.

Employees of at least three stores in the shopping centre across the street said they saw or heard nothing during a driving rainstorm when the accident happened.

ON LOOKOUT

Police Chief John Blackstock said "every man is on the lookout for the car and driver. We are trying not to leave a single loop-hole—this man is a killer and must be found."

"Traffic officers also appealed to anyone who may have seen the 5.45 p.m. accident. They are asked to telephone EV 4-1111."

"Anyone can have an accident—but let's hope this driver has the guts to own up to it," said the chief.

The fatal accident was the second in Victoria during the past week. William Mendes died Jan. 28 after being struck by a fire truck while driving at Johnson and Quadra, Jan. 27.

Access Solution Seen

Forest Firms May Lift Gates

By ALEC MERRIMAN

More and better public access to Vancouver Island forest areas by next summer appeared likely yesterday as developments pointed toward better understanding between logging companies, the government and the public.

Elk River Timber Co. told the Colonist it will take an immediate second look at the problem of public access over its section of the road in Gold River and Muchalat Arm on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood said he put wheels in motion yesterday to organize a series of roundtable meetings between principals concerned to discuss the access question on a sensible basis and find a solution of mutual advantage.

A recent change in the upper level management of Scott Paper Co., which controls Elk River Timber, gives hope for a better understanding and more amiable negotiation on public access.

The special deputy minister's committee, under chairmanship of deputy lands minister E. W. Bassett, which has been set up to study and recommend on access problems, has at last settled down to intensified serious meetings. Three meetings have been held in the last week.

Recreation Minister Westwood said he will delve deeply into the access problem when he speaks Friday in the Throne Speech debate in the legislature.

News of the Elk River Timber Company's second look at access from Campbell River to the west coast was given exclusively to the Colonist by

Let Gibson Stay Kiernan Decides

Mines Minister Kenneth Kiernan yesterday withdrew a request for the legislature to consider allegations of government graft and corruption levelled in a pre-session speech by North Vancouver Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson.

"I have not the slightest desire in any way to prevent the second member from North Vancouver from either sitting or speaking in this House," said the minister in a prepared statement read to the House.

"My opinion is that my protest has been registered," he said, "without attempting to anticipate the action of yourself or this House in any way."

Mr. Speaker. I would ask that the second member for North Vancouver be heard in this House in due course and that no action be taken by this House that would prevent the member from being heard."

The storm arose Tuesday when Mr. Kiernan referred to published reports of a speech made by Mr. Gibson at the University of B.C. last week in which he was quoted as saying that he would bare graft in the government, including the mines department.

The member, who resigned his seat for Lillooet in 1955 after his famous "money talks" speech in the legislature, faced a possible penalty of being jailed for the remainder of the session over his recent remarks.

NO DISCREDIT

Mr. Gibson told the legislature Tuesday night he had not intended to personally discredit the minister nor the civil servants in this department.

Pirates Free Captives Today Mutiny, Hunger New Threats

RECIFE, Brazil (UPI)—Captive passengers aboard the hijacked cruise ship Santa Maria shouted to passing boats that their Portuguese pirate captors would land them today, just before their fresh water supply gives out.

Shortage of food and water aboard the broiling-hot vessel, the threat of mutiny by the crew and growing official impatience over rebel demands for guarantees that they can keep the ship pointed to a final settlement today of the 12-day buccannery odyssey from the Spanish Main to this tropical port just south of the equator.

New Brazilian President Janio Quadros sent a message to pirate chief Henrique Guevara late last night. Word in Rio De Janeiro was that Quadros, who has granted the rebels asylum if they want it, might also let them leave Brazil unmolested with the ship if the 620 passengers and all of the 350 crewmen desiring to disembark are first put ashore.

The U.S. navy declared the ship was in Brazilian waters and said it was withdrawing from the chase, leaving the fate of the lines and passengers up to Brazil.

The Santa Maria was at the mouth of Recife harbor, three miles off shore.

Brazil said the U.S. could take the 42 Americans off at sea, but the navy said this was too risky in the ground swells to disembark are first put ashore.

The Santa Maria was at the mouth of Recife harbor, three miles off shore.

PROVED ABILITY

"These ships were designed and built to meet the threat of the modern submarine," said Admiral Rayner. "They have proved in exercises with live submarines their ability to do just that."

Mr. Husband said that in recent years VMD has spent $1,000,000 on new plants and thousands more dollars on training men for diversification of its operations. But he pointed out that of six B.C. shipyards that together built more than 50 per cent of Canada's wartime shipping, only two now remain in operation.

Mothers Fooled Salesman Jailed

WINNIPEG (CP)—George Thomas Thompson, 24, travelled Manitoba, greeting housewives who answered his door-to-door calls with a hearty handshake, a warm smile and "You have been chosen mother of the year."

Then he recited a list of gifts they would receive, some free and some at a discount.

All they had to do was sign one form.

Investigation found the form was a cheque. Police said the salesman cashed the cheques immediately. Thompson, a housewares firm salesman, Tuesday was sentenced to six months in jail after pleading guilty to 16 charges of fraud.

Police Win Race to Loot

MONTREAL (CP)—Detectives Wednesday discovered $234,000 worth of stolen bonds in a cardboard box in an east-end lane minutes before the box was scheduled to be picked up by garbage collectors.

T. R. Sheldon, manager of woodlands for Scott Paper Co., "We are looking into it, but it is too early yet to come up with a decision," he said. The Elk River company controls the eastern end of the 51-mile stretch of road from Campbell River to Metchosin, which runs over property crown-granted at the turn of the century.
LIMITED TO BUS
Tahsis Company controls the western end of the road. Public access to the road has been limited to a public bus, and people riding the bus are not allowed a stopover, without special permission. It is the only access to that part of the west coast.
Demands for public access to the road were made in the legislature Tuesday by Dan Campbell (S.C., Comox) and John Squires (C.C.F., Alberni).
Yesterday, Mr. Campbell described the new events as "hopeful reactions" and Mr. Squire said "this is good."

UN Welcomes Adlai

Warm Clasp with Russian

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Adlai Stevenson, urging that "peace among the nations begin with peace among the members of this council," marked his public debut as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations yesterday by seeking out Soviet ambassador Valerian Zorin for a warm handshake.

Remove Army From Politics Dag Demands

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld asked the United Nations Security Council Wednesday for authority to take the Congolese army out of political conflicts threatening the Congo with civil war.

Hammarskjöld said the recent transfer of deposed premier Patrice Lumumba to breakaway Katanga province seemed to have widened the rift between Congolese authorities.

He told the council the army had split into separate units taking sides in this conflict and itself "has been and continues to be the main threat to law and order in the Congo," the objective of the UN force there.

speech as warm as the other 10, but declared: "We want to hope that the new U.S. administration, whose representative is Mr. Stevenson, will be able to discharge its obligations much better than has unfortunately been the case up to now."

Stevenson acknowledged the council's welcome with a 15-minute declaration of U.S. policy in which he repeated President Kennedy's pledge of support for the United Nations.

"The new president of the United States has said he regards the United Nations as an instrument to end the cold war," he said. "We devoutly hope that all governments represented here will share his views... May peace among the nations begin with peace among the members of this council... Stevenson said the United States, "the oldest anti-colonial power," did not seek to "impose our system or philosophy" on any country.

"You cannot impose freedom," he said. He pledged "most earnest attention" by the United States to the disarmament of nuclear weapons and improving conditions in newly developing countries.

Congo Exhibits Red Arms Shipped to Lumumba Army

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—The Congolese central government Wednesday exhibited Communist-made arms, alleging they were supplied to forces loyal to jailed premier Patrice Lumumba via the United Arab Republic.

Congolese Foreign Minister Justin Bomboko exhibited 25 grenades and some small arms ammunition made in Czechoslovakia as "proof of foreign intervention" in Congolese affairs.

Bomboko said his government had lodged a protest with the UN Security Council.

Mr. Kennedy Was Right

ONE of the more interesting highlights of the United States presidential election campaign was the running debate between the two candidates on the matter of American prestige abroad.

The present president stubbornly maintained that the free world had lost confidence in American leadership to an alarming degree due to the Republican administration's vacillating policies. The then vice-president flatly denied this and declared that esteem for the United States was never higher.

Behind this particular crossing of swords was the fact that the United States government had caused a public opinion poll to be taken in Britain and France last May immediately following the collapse of the ill-fated summit meeting. Despite requests of the Democratic Party leaders for its release, the government kept the poll result under cover during the election campaign.

On assuming office, President Kennedy had full access to the files and immediately released the report—the full contents of which more than confirmed his pessimistic outlook.

The efficacy of such public opinion polls is always questionable, but if this one is to be taken at face value it reveals a situation so serious that it cannot be ignored. The survey, for instance, shows that in May—only six months before the U.S. election—the desire of Britons to become neutrals rose from 37 per cent in February to 46 per cent—a view aimed specifically against American leadership.

In the military field, 55 per cent of the polled Britons and 40 per cent of the French were convinced that Russia was ahead of America, while 12 per cent of the Britons and 25 per cent of the French thought America was ahead. Some 24 per cent of the Britons did not want American forces stationed in the United Kingdom.

In the cold war field, 48 per cent of the Britons and 39 per cent of the French thought the United States was not doing all she could to prevent another war. And, perhaps most disturbing of all, only 27 per cent of the British and 38 per cent of the French expressed any confidence at all in American leadership of the West.

Today there can be no doubt that President Kennedy was right—American prestige suffered a severe setback, particularly in the minds of its two staunchest NATO allies, Britain and France.

On the brighter side the new president has shown his ability to assess the damage and has lost little time in setting about repairing it. If he continues to follow the course he has indicated he need have no fear of failing.

Freedom and Pacifism

CRITICS of the federal government affect to see a contradiction in the efforts of External Affairs Minister Lester Pearson's statement that he would prefer to live under Communist rule than die in a nuclear war.

There is no conflict of view. Mr. Pearson is not suggesting that Canada should act unilaterally; that it should strip itself of means to defend itself, that it should tamely submit to an aggressor. He is simply trying to marshal the weight of the lesser powers in the hope this might deter the chief protagonists of the cold war and persuade them towards a ban on nuclear arms.

That is his aim as the foreign minister of this country, pursuing the path of peace on the international level. Mr. Harkness' duty is different but equally consistent with his responsibilities.

It is his task to keep Canada as militarily strong as the country's financial means permits. So long as the facts of military power in the world exist so long must he look with a realistic eye to Canadian defence. Thus his recent advice to reserve units to combat pacifist or defeatist tendencies among the Canadian people.

The latter, unfortunately, have been stimulated by Liberal leader Lester Pearson's statement that he would prefer to live under Communist rule than die in a nuclear war. The philosophy, that life is precious under any circumstances, no matter how evil or tyrannical, is dangerous. It can undermine the fibre of a nation.

It is also denied by the whole history of freedom. Had Britain submitted before the Nazis to this malaise of the mind, for instance, the Western world would now be under the Nazi heel, with gas chambers as one of the results of defeatism and complacency. If the West bowed meekly to Communist power and penetration the future would be no less bleak.

Long ago a Greek writer proclaimed that freedom was the privilege only of those who were prepared to defend it. That maxim has been proved a thousand times throughout history, and it still holds good. It is the philosophy that imbues Mr. Harkness in rousing Canadians to their defence duties.

Sooke Points the Way

SOOKE School Board's new rules governing the conduct of all students, but the older ones in particular, are one of the most heartening developments in the field of school discipline since the Greater Victoria board took steps, somewhat less stringent, to improve habits of dress.

Parents concerned about modern trends in co-educational associations will be greatly relieved by the board's action—an action which can be described as courageous in these days when throughout North America those in authority seem to be afraid to apply the firm hand of discipline to immature young people who are infants in the eyes of the law but who in their own estimation are both equipped and entitled to engage in habits far beyond their years.

Though it may be disputed by some of those dedicated to the now largely discredited "progressive" system of education, there can be little doubt that the disturbing habits of the young people against whose behavior such rules are aimed stems in large measure from the misdirection they have been given under that system.

They have been encouraged to throw off inhibitions and to both hold and express opinions about matters in which they are hopelessly inexperienced, and which hold great dangers for them in a society which still does not regard too intimate relations of the sexes lightly.

They have been encouraged further in the mistaken belief that their wishes and views are of sufficient importance to be taken public note of—opinions which for the most part would be ludicrous if they did not so often contain the elements of potential tragedy.

Under the Sooke School Board's excellent rules—influenced one has no doubt by conduct demanding correction—the pupils will be required to adhere to a rigid code of morality and orderly behavior at least during school hours. That some of them and perhaps some of their teachers as well may dislike and resent this curtailment of loose conduct could be taken as further evidence of the necessity for stricter control.

This is no time to be uttering nonsense about the "rights" of juveniles while they are being educated at public expense. The Chant report took note of the necessity for a stiffening of school discipline, and the Sooke board has had the good sense to exercise its authority without waiting for direction from above. It deserves the gratitude of the parents and the commendation of all who have the best interests of young people at heart.

London and the White House

By ALAN HARVEY, Canadian Press Staff Writer

FOR months, Whitehall has been looking for a lead from Washington. Admittedly, ministers could be found who regretted the breaking up of what they called the "old-boy network" linking London with the White House.

Privately, however, responsible Britons welcomed a new hand on the helm in Washington. They liked the look of President Kennedy and they nodded approvingly at the rehabilitation of the eggheads implicit in his cabinet appointments.

And British newspapers generally welcome the line of the State of the Union message to Congress. It is hailed variously as a stirring call to action, a message imparting new zest to the Western alliance, a replacement of bromides by candor.

And yet, there is just a possibility that some of the more experienced hands in Whitehall may feel that the president is being a little precipitate.

It would be wrong to overemphasize any suggestions of British reserve. It is far too early to make an assessment. For the time being, any British worries about Kennedy are concentrated on his probable approach to Africa.

Fears that Kennedy may force the pace in Africa are probably premature. The new president is obviously going to have his hands full in dealing with domestic problems and the broader picture of East-West relations.

Nevertheless, the rejoicing about Kennedy seems greater on the left than the right. Probably nobody in the government would go so far as Labor party intellectual R. H. S. Crossman, who writes:

"At one fell swoop the new president has replaced the dreariest by the ablest administration of the century."

"Now how about survivors from this other plane that we downed?"

Thinking Aloud

... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings"
By TOM TAYLOR

WHEN the atom was first split the world in its innocence hailed this great scientific achievement. Nor I suppose are scientists primarily to blame for what happened after this Pandora's box was opened, although without them the experiments would have stopped dead. In warring scientists cannot very well refuse to promote their country's interests by furthering the production of powerful weapons of destruction. Peacetime is perhaps a different proposition. Need they invent more degrees of horror?

A Swedish medical researcher, for instance, is reported to be experimenting with a drug that could brainwash an entire population when added to the water supply. We are brainwashed enough, surely, via television.

Couldn't this specialist in unpleasant things just forget the whole business? Quietly drop it. If this drug has the dreadful potential he thinks it may have, why bother to find out? Many scientists are said to be disturbed by the part they have played in the invention of lethal weapons. They could make amends by keeping mum about some future discoveries if these are harmful to mankind.

The trouble is, of course, that all the scientists of the world would have to agree, and in the current stage of cold war dissension this seems to be impossible of achievement. And so Pandora's box gets bigger and bigger.

An eastern newspaper has been counting Hansard and finds that this record of parliamentary eloquence contains for 1960 no fewer than 10,000,000 words, all spoken before they were printed. This is one aspect of political life to which MPs respond with alacrity. If they are to be faulted it is certainly not in their proclivity for speech.

The sad thing, I suppose, as was indicated in this space a few days ago in discussing words and wheels, is that it would be mainly the same words used over and over again that helped to fill this massive volume. But it reveals afresh that the world simply couldn't get along very well without words, old and tired though these must be by this time.

My comments on the cavalry charge picture in the Armory have drawn response. An Oak Bay reader telephones to say that while no Canadian forces operated as such in the Palestine campaign of 1916-18 at least eight Canadians in his knowledge took part. He himself was Allenby's staff and has detailed memories of those days.

A Gordon Head man writes to quote from Allenby's dispatches and the records of the 32nd and Yeomanry divisions about this display of cavalry dash which yours truly watched with admiration. The objective was a ridge called El Mughar, near the Yebnah I cited, and the charge was carried out by the Berks, Bucks and Dorset Yeomanry. And a fine sight they were as they crossed an open plain under shell, machine gun and rifle fire.

Another reader, in Saanichton, advises me that the picture in question was commissioned by Lord Parmoor, father of the Lt. Col. Cripps who commanded the Bucks in the charge. The scenery was painted on the spot after the war ended, and the original was presented to the United Services Club in London. General Allenby was so pleased with the capture of El Mughar ridge he gave the yeomanry brigade the right to mount the main guard with swords instead of rifles. This, adds my correspondent, caused a flutter at the Kantara base, as no one knew the drill.

My thanks to all three readers for their interesting comments. Now if someone will tell me how this picture, original or copy, comes to be in the Armory, the story will be complete.

Reports from Ottawa

WHEN a dentist probes a cavity, he depends on the patient's reaction to tell him how sore it is.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's speech at the United Nations last September was like a dentist's probe. The patient screamed all right, but listening few Western ears were of the patient get through to us in full details, thanks to the Mercantile Bank of Canada, the newest of this country's chartered banks.

The bank's news letter quotes the Swiss newspaper Neue Zurcher Zeitung as the only segment of the world press that followed up Diefenbaker's UN speech of Sept. 28—the speech in which the PM took off on the Khrushchev about Soviet colonialism in Eastern Europe.

Khrushchev had declared Russia stood for "liberation from the colonial yoke" of Africans and the peoples of other continents. But, countered Diefenbaker, "What of Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia? What of the freedom-loving Ukrainians?" he asked, calling on Khrushchev to permit free elections in these countries.

"The people of the Soviet Union and its satellites heard about the speech through the American-sponsored radio station Free Europe in Munich, which devoted quite a number of its broadcasts to various aspects of Mr. Diefenbaker's remarks," the bank's news letter reported on the basis of Neue Zurcher Zeitung stories.

"For days on end, Radio Kiev indulged in taunts at the Canadian prime minister, and 10 provincial stations schooled with similar outbursts. This part of the campaign over, both eminent personalities and ordinary mortals were given a turn to comment. Authors and artists were also called upon, but organizers of the protest registered dismay over the note of resignation in many of the statements made and the opportunistic nature of some others, opportunism having become stronger again since the quashing of the Hungarian uprising."

Neue Zurcher Zeitung noted that this reaction indicates the non-Russian people of the U.S.S.R. are dissatisfied with Moscow's rule, and that the West should pay more attention to "the problem of Soviet colonialism."

However, it seems to me that the validity of this advice depends on the aims of the West. If the aim is to maximize internal dissensions in the U.S.S.R. as part of a new cold war campaign, the advice is good. If the aim is to create an atmosphere favorable to an East-West political settlement and disarmament, the advice is madness.

If the intent is, as it was at least in part last September, to unmask the hypocrisy of Khrushchev's claim to be the champion of colonial peoples of Africa and Asia, the advice is of doubtful value. With Asians and Africans, colonialism is a matter of color as well as oppression. They are unmoved by the tyranny of white men against other white men, but in their eyes even the benevolent rule of white men over black, brown and yellow men is evil.

Diefenbaker should have realized this; should have damned Khrushchev not solely for the subjugation of the Balts and Ukrainians. Instead, he should have wept as well for the fate of yellow-skinned Mongols and Tartars groaning under the Communist yoke in Central Asia.

However, Mr. Diefenbaker is a politician, and while there are many Balts and Ukrainians in Canada, there is perhaps not a single Kazakh or Uzbek.

Process of Elimination

By GREGORY CLARK

THE principle of Communism as far as the international party is concerned is to ensure that all intelligent people are in the party. If a person is intelligent but unwilling to come, body and bristles, into the party, he is disposed of. This is indisputable, as far as the Communist-controlled areas of the map are concerned.

It is not a new principle in politics. There were long periods of time in Europe in which, if you were not a Christian in the approved meaning of the term, you were disposed of. History consists, for centuries at a time, of the record of states or communities in which the ruling clique employed the time-honored process of elimination to those who resisted the status quo.

And among us right now are any number of people who sincerely believe that the only practical method of handling those who disagree with locally accepted ways and means is to squish 'em, suppress 'em, or for two pins pack them off to some other place.

But the only thing wrong with the principle—as the Communists are bound to find out, just as our Christian and libertarian forebears found out—is that when the only intelligent people left are of the debased type of intelligence that will pander and submit to force for the sake of security and comfort, then you have a highly selected breed of toadies who collapse of their own fat. It isn't tyranny that changes the shape of the nations; it is toadyism.

Death in Dignity

These Lavish Funerals

(From The Ottawa Journal)

THE "agonizing reappraisal" which undertakers were asked by the Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Baggio, to make of their business should also extend to the public's attitude towards the cost and the conventions of funerals.

The funeral directors are quite right: the public does ask for expensive services. Somehow the notion has grown that reverence for the dead and respect for their memory is shown by the lavishness of a funeral.

The funeral directors, of course, have not been conspicuous opponents of the concept. But the ultimate reasons for the high cost of dying are deep in the customs and the traditions of the age.

It is time some of these traditions were re-examined. One wonders about the absolute purity of motive in ordering expensive caskets. Is it all a tribute to the dead or a subtle flattery of the living?

The Apostolic Delegate was blunt. He said:

"The desire to make a showing in the eyes of one's friends and outside one's neighbors... has created a demand for unnecessary display and trills."

It is not only the actual cost of funerals which bears examination. Indeed, the average figures given by the funeral directors—between $200 and $400—may even be reasonable enough. Certainly it is lower than many might have thought. The hundred eulogisms which try to conceal the irrevocable fact of death; the too extended wakes which are such endurance tests to the survivors; these also need changing.

Human dignity cannot be bought. But it can be lost. Archbishop Baggio showed how:

"When a poor man attempts to make a lavish display... it is then he suffers a loss of dignity."

Washington Angle

Return to Private Diplomacy

By MARQUIS CHILDS

IN his new approach to Soviet-American relations President Kennedy has shown that he means to try to avoid playing the game of dragon killer.

It has been a popular game in recent years and anyone with a buoyant rhetoric or a good speech writer—admirals, generals, senators—has been able to play. The familiar words of denunciation have been counters in the game, and they have passed from one player to another.

But however much the game may have set the adrenalin flowing, it contributed little or nothing to America's strength. And the task of negotiation was made very much more difficult for President Eisenhower and everyone else with responsibility for trying to lessen the intolerable tensions that have gripped the world.

From the first Mr. Kennedy has been determined to approach the Soviet Union with careful realism as divorced as possible from the emotional climate of recent months.

When Premier Khrushchev congratulated him on his election there were those who advised a terse or even cursory reply. But when he saw a draft reply that had been prepared he added two or three sentences in his own hand so that the tone of his message matched that of the Soviet premier.

Again when he received a New Year's greeting by an unofficial and circuitous route expressing a hope for better relations in the New Year he responded with courtesy.

In this and all that has followed there was no emotional rush to believe that everything had been changed by the election. The effort, in the phrase the president used at his press conference, was to create an atmosphere of civility in which a hope of change was not excluded.

He had been told in mid-December that the American RB-47 fliers would in all probability be released shortly after the inauguration. This word came from two of his advisers who attended the meeting of top-level American and Soviet scientists held in Moscow at the end of November and the beginning of December. Both Jerome Wiesner, subsequently named science adviser, and Walt Whitman Bishop, appointed as deputy special assistant to the president in security matters, took part in the meeting at which not only scientists but high-level Soviet administrators were present.

The president-elect was careful to say nothing in advance about this prospect. To have anticipated it would have been perhaps to have killed it.

He could, therefore, as one of his first steps, authorize Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson to respond to Premier Khrushchev's statement that the prisoners would be released by saying that this was a welcome step, since it removed a serious obstacle to better Soviet-American relations.

At the Moscow meeting in December the insistent theme of the Russians in the long—often all night—sessions was the need to know the American position on disarmament. Let us know what you want to try to do, give us your plan, they kept saying.

This last is, of course, the most immediate and even the most urgent goal of the Kennedy administration—to work out a complete and detailed disarmament plan. This will take time. But not until it is done will any serious, long-range negotiation be possible.

The Americans in the Moscow session stressed the need for the Soviets on their side to understand that time for preparation would be required. But their most insistent theme was on whether the Soviets would continue to try to heat up situations such as Laos, the Congo and Cuba. If this was to go on, then no negotiation whatsoever would be possible.

In recent years some of the severest criticism has been directed at summit meetings when the West was unprepared to go to a summit and when "open skies" proposals were pulled out of an unexpected hat. The late John Foster Dulles was criticized for his personal diplomacy and for rushing from one capital to the other in pursuit of personal understandings. This criticism came both from those who were anxious for serious negotiation and those who insisted that negotiations of any kind was out of the question.

The quiet and private diplomacy that the president and his secretary of state, Dean Rusk, intend to employ is the opposite of spectacular. It will not produce immediate headlines nor will it result in those newsreel and television shots of seemingly happy statesmen clinking their martini glasses.

But the method should have a serious try and those who have been most critical of summitry should be the first to welcome it. That quotation from St. Paul in the president's inaugural address, "rejoicing in hope, patient in tribulation," sums up as well as anything could the intention of the moment.

Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,
Why wert not thou born in my father's dwelling?
So might we talk of the old familiar faces.

And some are taken from me; all are departed;
All are gone, the old familiar faces.

Driver's Memory Erased By Crash Where 17 Died

EDMONTON (CP) — Bus driver Frank Budney said Wednesday he remembers nothing about the Nov. 29 collision between his school bus and a fast-moving freight train at Lamont, 45 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Seventeen high school students were killed, Budney said Wednesday. He remembers nothing about the Nov. 29 collision between his school bus and a fast-moving freight train at Lamont, 45 miles northeast of Edmonton.

Budney, 31, spoke as an inquest began into the deaths. The last thing he remembered before the accident was "going to bed Nov. 28. The next thing I remember was getting out of bed Dec. 26." Dr. Morley Young of Lamont said brain injuries suffered in the crash caused the driver to lose his memory.

The doctor said Budney had no memory of anything from three or four days prior to the accident "until around Christmas at the hospital."

Budney told the coroner's jury he did not have a class A licence required by law in Alberta for bus drivers and he had driven a school bus for a total of about four months, including one month in Lamont.

He said he had written an examination for a B drivers' licence in 1959 but had failed.

He had never been asked by the Lamont school district about his licence and could not remember Gregory Moshanski, owner of the bus—asking if he had a class A licence.

Moshanski testified that before hiring Budney he checked with two of his previous employers and both gave him good recommendations.

Moshanski also said Budney told him he had a class A licence.

Budney identified a letter as a recommendation to operate a school bus and said it was signed by the secretary of the Lamont school division. He had no interview with the school board before he began driving the school bus.

Asked if he drank any alcohol the day before the accident, the driver said no.

He was born in Finistère, Brittany, France, and was ordained a priest in 1904. He moved to Saskatchewan in 1920 and came to Victoria in 1945. He spent much of his free time visiting hospital patients in the city and he

Births Deaths Lower

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's birth rate declined last year to the lowest level since the Second World War, the bureau of statistics reported yesterday. But the death rate dropped to a record low—7.7 persons in each 1,000 population—one of the lowest in the world.

The marriage rate also declined to the lowest point since 1936, the bureau said in a preliminary report on vital statistics of Canadians, said Wednesday.

Many Untrained In Social Work

MONTREAL (CP)—Only 25 per cent of the people in social work in North America are professionally qualified, James A. Linn of New York, president of Time Incorporated, said Wednesday.

In an address opening the ninth annual conference of the Council of Social Work Education, Mr. Linn said each year 15,000 new social work graduates were needed in Canada and the U.S., but last year, for example, 2,201 were provided.

Mr. Linn said the basic difficulty of recruiting social workers lies in the fact that individuals flock into jobs that offer money and prestige.

"The social work field is low in both. It is unrealistic to expect that bright young people will train with six years of college work in order to take a job that pays the same salary as that for an ordinary, beginning clerk."

Als' Boss Admits Mistake All His

MONTREAL (CP)—Ted Workman, owner of the Montreal Alouettes, said Wednesday he made a mistake in the way he handled the now-famous Sam Etcheverry-Hal Patterson trade.

"The mistake I made was in not consulting Sam and Hal before I announced the trade," Workman said in an interview.

"I have since given it a great deal of thought and I'm convinced that if I had talked it over, particularly with Sam, as I should have done, he would have agreed with me and would have willingly gone to the Hamilton club."

Workman was interviewed by Elmer Ferguson, sports columnist for the Montreal Star.

The Big Four football club president also confirmed there was a private agreement between the Als and Etcheverry that he would not be traded without his consent and that if Etcheverry does not report to the Tiger-Cats, Hamilton will retain quarterback Bernie Faloney.

The original trade, which stunned Canadian football fans, sent quarterback Etcheverry and end Patterson to Hamilton for Faloney and defensive end Don Paquette.

Patterson agreed to sign with Hamilton but Etcheverry has since signed with St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League and Faloney has asked the Supreme Court of Ontario to straighten out his status.

PROUDER BLAME

"I shoulder all the responsibility, personally, for the trade," Workman said.

"I admit I made a mistake, as who doesn't? Not a mistake concerning the merits of the trade itself, which I think is an excellent deal for the Alouettes and for football in Montreal."

He said "there's no question there was an agreement between Sam and the club that he should not be traded without being consulted."

"That was not in the actual contract as furnished to the Canadian Football League. It was a privately signed agreement between Sam and the club not incorporated in the actual contract, but it is, I feel, quite binding nevertheless."

Workman said he doesn't know whether the agreement will constitute a legal point enabling Sam to play in the NFL. He said the St. Louis contract had not yet been ratified by NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle "and I will be very surprised if there is such ratification as it will shatter all the understandings between Canadian and American organized football."

The Als owner said "it is probably my fault too that the impression was allowed to become broadcast that the deal would stand even though Sam did not report to the Ticks."

Island Gloves In Victoria

Vancouver Island Golden Gloves boxing card will be held in Victoria in mid-February.

Any fighter wishing to enter or to obtain more information is asked to write to Bert Wilkinson, 1034 Wychbury, Victoria.

which have circulated since the trade, Workman said "there was nothing personal in the deal. I was aiming at a change in our type of play."

Asked if there had been any bona fide offers to buy Alouettes since the trade, Workman said there had been at least a dozen, but he isn't interested in selling.

Mr. K's Grand National Entries Stir Interest in Spring Classic

LONDON (Special)—Russian horses in the Grand National, the bastion of British racing?

Impossible as it may seem, it appears that Russian premier Nikita Khrushchev will have a big interest in the world's toughest horse race at Aintree March 25.

Three state-owned Soviet runners—Epigraff II, Grifol and Relief—cleared the first hurdle for a starting position in this steeplechase classic when the British government lifted a ban barring their entry.

Stubborn Aussies Struggle to Draw

ADELAIDE (Reuters)—Ken Mackay and Lindsay Kilne held out for 108 minutes in a last-wicket partnership Wednesday and saved Australia from what appeared to be certain defeat in the fourth cricket test match against the West Indians.

The West Indians tried everything in their power to break through the partnership but Kilne and Mackay stuck doggedly to their task and earned Australia a draw.

The result left the series deadlocked at one victory.

Gadsby Back Again With Winning Goal

NEW YORK—Bill Gadsby stepped back into the lineup after a 10-day layoff here last night and scored the winning goal as New York Rangers edged Chicago Black Hawks, 3-1, and kept alive their faint hopes of a playoff spot in the National Hockey League.

Gadsby's goal broke a 1-1 tie with 17 seconds gone in the third period, and John Hanna made it 3-1 on a shot into the empty net.

The winning goal wasn't exactly a picture effort. Gadsby, out of action since Jan. 22 with an acute muscle spasm in his back, shot from just inside the blue line. Goalie Glen Hall, intent on players closer in, never even saw the puck as it drifted past him.

Hanna added the clincher at 19:48 when he intercepted a pass and went the length of the ice to park the puck in the empty net.

Ron Murphy scored for Chicago in the first period and Floyd Smith tied it up in the second. Victory left Rangers still 11 points behind the fourth-place Detroit Red Wings and 13 behind Chicago Black Hawks with 22 games to play.

"We're not out of the playoffs yet," asserted coach Alf Pike. "The Hawks have to play us four more times and we can catch them or the Red Wings if we get a hot streak going."

Chant Critics 'No Surprise'

Education Minister Leslie Peterson said yesterday he does not find criticism of the Chant report on education "too disturbing."

"Certainly some of the recommendations as a result of the Chant report are with opinions held by some people actively engaged in education," he said. "Were it not so there would have been little point in appointing a royal commission."

B.C. to Teach Labor Skills At New Mainland Institute

An institute of advanced technology designed to produce a more highly skilled and more efficient labor force will be built in Burnaby, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said yesterday.

Announcement that B.C. would build such an institute was made in the Throne Speech last week.

RECENT SURVEY

The minister said a recent survey of five skilled occupations disclosed that about 35 per cent of the workmen had received the greater part of their training outside Canada. "While we welcome these workers and appreciate their skills, nevertheless we cannot depend upon them to meet our requirements in future to the detriment of our own youth," he told the legislature.

40,000 WORKERS

It was estimated 40,000 young men and women in the 15 to 19-year age bracket sought employment in the last 10 years and this rate will double in the next five years. "These young people must have access to training facilities if they are to meet the challenge of the anticipated industrial world of the future," he said.

The minister said the 40-acre Burnaby site allowed for future expansion of both vocational technical training programs.

It was expected the project could be completed by 1963 and regular full-day and evening instruction would be offered.

ment but asked that he be given the right to be heard before the legislature judged him.

"I do not presume, Mr. Speaker, to in any way intrude on the prerogative of your high office or in this legislative assembly," said Mr. Kiernan yesterday.

"My purpose in drawing to your attention the statements of the second member from North Vancouver was to protest, in no uncertain fashion, the tendency of some people in supposedly responsible positions as members of this legislative assembly making slanderous and untruthful statements and then attempting to laugh them off as just being politics."

U.S. Clears Dependents

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy has lifted former President Eisenhower's controversial restrictions on dependents following U.S. servicemen to overseas posts.

The CCF was attacked yesterday for discouraging economic growth and causing unemployment.

Labor Minister Leslie Peterson said the key to more jobs was primarily the higher rate of economic growth, greater development and more industry.

"The threat of socialization of industry does nothing to encourage economic growth," he said. "The verbal attacks in this legislature against private firms and individuals who are prepared to invest their money and develop this province does not encourage economic growth."

"The threat or promise of spending millions of dollars to take over an existing industry which would not create a single new job does nothing to encourage future capital investment in the province."

"I think it is time that everyone realized that it is only by encouraging capital investment, encouraging industry and maintaining confidence in the future of the country that we will be able to create more jobs," he said.

ACCEPT RESPONSIBILITY
The minister added that the provincial government had a responsibility to expand job opportunities "and we accept that responsibility" but the major responsibility for unemployment rested fairly on the shoulders of the federal government.

"Time and time again we have warned the Conservative federal government and their Liberal predecessors that their outdated monetary policies would bring us to the position which we find ourselves today," he said.

THREE FRONTS

Mr. Peterson said the provincial government attack on unemployment had been on three major fronts:

• By encouraging capital investment to the greatest ex-

Secret Centre Closed

PRINCE ALBERT (CP)—The federal government's $1,000,000 radar research laboratory, seven miles west of here, was shut down indefinitely Wednesday following a fire that demolished the control room, heart of the top-secret project.

The fire Tuesday destroyed most of the scientific equipment in the main laboratory.

RADAR DISH

An 86-foot tower 50 yards away, topped by a radar "dish" for tracking satellites and rockets and gathering data about northern lights, was not touched. Test and auxiliary equipment was saved but a tracking data processor, too big to be moved, was destroyed.

NEW WING

The fire broke out in a new wing of the structure where construction work had just started. Origin was unknown.

Dr. J. H. Meek, superintendent of the Defence Research Board's communications laboratories, left Ottawa with a team of experts to help salvage operations.

Prison Can't Hold 'Cog' of a Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP)—A man awaiting sentence on a charge of exhibiting obscene movies was released from nearby Oakalla prison farm to help in an emergency operation.

John Basaraba, a hospital employee, was released but later fined $200 after doctors told police the prisoner was the only man in British Columbia who could operate the Vancouver General Hospital's heart and lung machine.

Keys from Prison Open Scores of Mailboxes

OTTAWA (CP)—The Citizen says scores of government mailboxes in the capital have been looted by thieves armed with master keys believed made at Kingston Penitentiary.

No estimate was made of what has been stolen but the newspaper says hundreds of government cheques have been forged and cashed recently.

Four men were arrested here last week and their hotel room contained keys, paper and forgery equipment for making government cheques. Police said at the time that with this equipment the thieves could get into the boxes, take serial numbers and names from legitimate cheques and cash bogus ones before the originals reached their owners.

Police said it may be weeks before full extent of the thefts is determined.

Meanwhile, Justice Minister Fulton told the Commons yesterday he has ordered a full investigation into reports that master keys to government mailboxes had been made in Kingston penitentiary for a ring of thieves and forgers.

Area Fears 'Hook' in Amalgamation 'Bait'

By E. O. MARRION

Wary of hooks, Greater Victoria municipal leaders yesterday sniffed and turned away from the bait J. Donald Smith proposes the government should use to try to bring about amalgamation.

The Victoria Social Credit MLA suggested Tuesday that the government offer a reward for a "yes" vote on amalgamation—$500,000 as a centennial gift in 1962 and $200,000 a year for 10 years. He said amalgamation would put the government ahead because of the savings which would follow.

City officials saw a hook in his reference to provincial savings.

The province now pays annual grants to municipalities on a sliding scale, from $16 per capita for the first 3,500 residents down to $6.50 per capita for all over 50,000.

Greater Victoria as a single municipality, according to a rough estimate, would receive $250,000 a year less from the provincial government than as four separate municipalities.

And because cities must pay for highway construction within their boundaries, amalgamated Victoria might have to pay for Blanshard Street extension in Saanich. This cost, expected to exceed $500,000, will be paid by the province under present circumstances.

"If it would result in this much less aid," said Mayor Percy Scurrell, "it would be no good. To heck with that! We're not looking for less, we're looking for more."

Regardless of this factor, said Reeve George Murdoch of Oak Bay, his municipality's share of a $200,000 grant would be equivalent to less than one mill of taxation, "and Oak Bay property owners' taxes would go up at least nine mills in the event of amalgamation. So where would the taxpayer get off?"

"I haven't changed my opinion," said Reeve A. C. Wurtels of Esquimalt.

"We're doing very nicely, and the intermunicipal committee is working well. We feel this way, that we like the personalized service of our own municipality, and until the present system fails to work well, why make any changes?"

Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich was not available for comment.

Rules Aim At Few

By TED SHACKLEFORD

Less than five per cent of students were involved in incidents which prompted new rules to govern the conduct of all students in Sooke school district, trustee John Williams said last night.

"Our school board acknowledges that the behavior of the very vast majority of students in our schools is above reproach," he said. "The board regrets the inference that the general behavior has been otherwise."

IN OCTOBER

Mr. Williams added that the rules were imposed in October at Milnes Landing Junior-Senior High School, following complaints by a delegation of parents.

The rules worked so well at Milnes Landing that they were extended to cover Belmont High School and Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School.

And, the Colonist found yesterday, some Greater Victoria schools have rules similar to some of those imposed by the Sooke school board. The seven rules are:

- Those students who bring their lunches to school should not be permitted to leave the grounds at noon time.

- No visiting cars should be allowed on the school grounds at noon.

- No students should be permitted to sit in cars at noon.

- All students who take their lunches should be supervised in their classrooms for a 15-minute period at noon.

- Boys and girls should not be permitted to pair off at noon time.

- During the balance of the lunch hour, after lunches have been eaten, boys and girls should be under the supervision of staff members.

- Students are not to leave the grounds while waiting for the school bus.

"The board is responsible for students from the time they get aboard the school bus in the morning until they get off again in the afternoon," Mr. Williams pointed out. "So long as these regulations are just and they don't impose any hardship I don't see any reason for changing them."

NO INCIDENTS

No incidents, similar to those which sparked complaints by parents have occurred at Belmont, Principal A. H. Stephenson said last night.

In a joint statement with the school's student council, Mr. Stephenson said students are concerned over the inferences drawn by students in other schools because of the imposition of the rules.

BAD PENNIES

"No one—certainly not these students—deny the presence of 'bad pennies,' he said. "School regulations and adult laws are made on their account."

"However, because of their presence, it is unwise and unfair to judge the society in which they are found to be corrupt."

Mrs. Irene Byers, president of the Greater Victoria Parent-Teacher Council, said last night that some Greater Victoria schools at present restrict children from leaving the school grounds during the lunch hour without their parents' permission.

"That type of rule is pretty well standard everywhere," she said. "I could not understand that they didn't have it in Sooke district."

Superintendent John Gough of the Greater Victoria School Board said no rule has been laid down by the board, covering whether students may leave the school grounds at lunch time.

Artists on Causeway Good Idea, Says Mayor

Proposal of the Victoria Society of Artists to let selected artists paint and sell their works on the Causeway this summer has the approval of Mayor Percy Scurrell. He said, "It would be quite a tourist attraction."

Three Small Boys' Honesty Makes Everybody Happy

Three Saanich boys and an old-age pensioner all had cause to rejoice early this week when honesty brought its reward to the youngsters. Frederick Clarkson, walking along Saanich Road to his home at 3541 Saanich Road, up by Brian and Jimmy Martin, 9 and 7 years old, of 860 Seymour, while on their way home from school.

"At first I thought it was play money," Brian said yesterday, "but when we saw it was real we didn't know what to think, we just picked it up and ran home as fast as we could." Together the lads accounted for $115.

Sharon, their older sister, phoned their parents who suggested phoning the police and the money was returned.

Balance of the money was found and returned by eight-year-old Jim Morgan, 3557 Saanich Road.

Mr. Clarkson called the boys to his home and rewarded them with $2 each for their trouble and honesty.

Alberni Inlet Monster

'Tzartusaurus' Seen

PORT ALBERNI—"Tzartusaurus" has made an appearance in Alberni Inlet.

A monster with qualities comparable to those of Victoria's Cadborosaurus and Kelowna's Ogopogo, it has been sighted frequently during the past few months by crew and passengers of the Alberni Marine Transportation Ltd. vessel Lady Rose.

Although he has never seen the creature in its entirety, John Monruef of Marine Transportation said he is certain that it is over 20 feet in length. The color, he said, is not that of a whale or black fish.

The monster appears to inhabit the inlet between Pocahontas Rock and Chup Point. The latter point is close to Tzartus Island. Kildonan residents have also reported seeing Tzartusaurus and one resident of the village said he obtained a clear view of the creature from a plane.

Persons aboard the Lady Rose have sometimes seen Tzartusaurus twice in one day. At other times he does not make an appearance for a period of several days.

The turmoil made by the creature in the water has impressed most of the travellers.

While Mr. Monruef has suggested that there is probably no great mystery surrounding "Tzartusaurus" identity, others cling to various theories, some bordering on the fantastic.

Plan Calls for Admissions Board

Federation Asks Authority To Rule on Teaching Ability

A special committee of the B.C. Teachers Federation has proposed that it become the first group within the profession anywhere to rule on the competence of its own members.

Findings of the special committee on membership, headed by B. C. Gillie, principal of S. J. Willis Junior High School, have been sent to everyone in the BCTF. It follows 24 years of study.

The plan calls for establishment of a board of admissions and review and outlines four teacher categories for which membership cards will be issued annually. Teachers who are judged incompetent will be issued a card stating "category withheld."

NOT UNTIL 1963
Mr. Gillie said "for all practical purposes" the plan could not begin to function before the spring of 1962. It will be discussed by BCTF membership at the annual convention this Easter.

"No wholesale evaluation of teacher competence is involved," said Mr. Gillie in explaining the plan, "but those obviously unsuited to teaching would be prevented from becoming a liability to the profession."

AMPLE SAFEGUARDS
He said salaries would continue to be the result of "normal supply and demand" coupled with whatever bargaining procedure may be in effect.

A vital part of the plan, Mr. Gillie added, lies in the "ample and effective safeguards" of the normal rights of the individual teacher.

Experienced teachers with a minimum of five-year university training would be known as professionally certified teachers.

There is also the addition of a new category—provisionally professionally certified teachers—to cover those older teachers who are doing a good job, but may lack one year of the full five-year university requirements.

Those who have classroom experience and hold a permanent B.C. teaching certificate would be put in the "teacher" category. Provisionally certified teachers would include any member entering the profession for the first time, and qualified and experienced teachers from outside the province for a lesser period.

The eight-member board of admissions and review would be drawn from within the profession and investigate complaints of incompetence filed against members by district superintendents, principals and other officials. Appeals would be heard by the executive of BCTF, none of whom would be permitted to sit on the board.

INCOMPETENCE RULINGS
Major changes in the latest plan, from a preliminary report presented by the committee on membership a year ago, include doing away with all reference to "downgrading" of teachers who fail to maintain professional standards, in favor of incompetence rulings.

Teaching by TV Wins Students

Two classes of Grade 9 students at S. J. Willis Junior High School reacted enthusiastically to an experimental television science lesson staged this week, principal B. C. Gillie said last night.

Mr. Gillie told department of education officials and other invited guests attending a demonstration of TV as a teaching medium he was greatly surprised by the genuine interest shown by the 60 students.

"Most youngsters today are pretty blasé when it comes to television and most of them have seen things we could never hope to produce in the classroom," the principal said. "But despite the fact that TV is no novelty there was better attention in the class than we have had in a long time."

School superintendent John Gough said he was confident Greater Victoria schools would shortly be taking advantage of televised lessons prepared by the CBC in collaboration with provincial departments of education.

A TV demonstration classes in science by Robert Travis, and in clay modelling by Hugh Mooney, will continue tonight for PTA and school auxiliary representatives and Friday for principals.

CCF Busily Warming Griddle for Williston

Peter Bruton's Capital Notebook

A day in the legislature . . .

SECOND LOOK: Due to face another round of CCF questioning is Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston who yesterday denied that a firm involved in the Sommers bribery case has since done work for the government.

Randolph Harding (CCF—Kaslo-Slocan) asked Mr. Williston on opening day whether Consolidated Services Ltd., C. D. Schultz & Co. Ltd., and C. D. Schultz Appraisal Company Ltd. had received a contract from Mr. Williston's department for work since May 22, 1958.

Mr. Williston replied that no contracts had been given the company.

Charles D. Schultz and his firm of C. D. Schultz & Co. Ltd. were defendants in the marathon case which saw former lands and forests minister Robert E. Sommers sentenced to five years for bribery.

Both Mr. Schultz and his firm were acquitted on four of nine charges with the jury unable to serve on the other five.

The second round of questioning is in store for Mr. Williston because the Cranbrook Courier of Aug. 18 last said very definitely that C. D. Schultz & Co. Ltd. had received a contract with the department of lands and forests for an inventory and evaluation of forest along a 106-mile pipeline route.

DANGEROUS ART: Youthful Tracy Gargrave, who no longer can qualify as the youngest member of the legislature, said that North Vancouver Liberal M.L.A. Gordon Gibson practices the art of "limbo-dancing."

This art, he said, involved going out on as long a limb as possible without it breaking or someone saving it off.

Tony, who represents the Mackenzie riding for the CCF, has given way as the "baby" of the House to fellow CCFer Jim Rhodes of Delta.

MULTIPLE RIDING: The problems of constituents in the far north were brought vividly to light yesterday by Miss Carmel, a former newswoman who is now Social Credit M.L.A. for South Peace River.

He swore he received this letter from a constituent:

"Dear Mr. Carmel, I voted for you three times. We need a new 100-bed hospital in Dawson Creek. What are you doing about it?"

There was a P.S.: "The three times I voted for you was in the 1956 election."

TIMES ARE TOUGH: Labor Minister Leslie Peterson was chiding the CCF on its objections to having foreign capital and foreign investors coming to B.C.

"Why they even object to the poor Swedes coming here," he said.

It was perhaps the most ludicrous description of multi-millionaire Mr. Axel Wenner-Gren ever voiced in the legislature.

THE PEOPLE WRITE: The item we had here about the naming of the new ferry to go on the Swartz Bay-Tow. wassen run sparked this letter yesterday:

"I have been shocked into writing this letter. Reading through today's Colonist I realized with mounting horror that I might well have the doubtful pleasure of being conveyed to Vancouver in the future by a vessel bearing the unusual name of 'B.S. Bennett, Queen of the Isles.'"

W. J. Langwith suggested a much more appropriate name would be the B.S. Active Pass.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: We are 13-year-old identical twin girls. Mom has always dressed us alike. We didn't mind until lately. Mom agrees now that we are getting to be more grown up we ought to be able to express our own likes and dislikes. My twin sister and I don't agree on everything any more.

Our dad says we should dress alike because it looks cute. He and Mom have gotten into big arguments over this. We told him we don't want to dress alike any longer. He says we should do it to make him happy. We hate to go against him. What is your advice?—TWO OF A KIND.

Dear Two: It's unfair of your father to ask you to dress alike to "make him happy."

Dressing alike is an attention-getting gimmick. It defeats a central principle of rearing children which is to treat each child as an individual.

Some twins choose to dress alike because it sets them apart from the crowd. You two are apparently bright girls who want to be individuals—and hooray for you! Tell your dad to please let you grow up as two people and not as halves of a single unit. God made each of us different. Insist on being yourselves. It's your birthright.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I were invited to the home of friends last Saturday night. It's about a 35-mile drive.

Shortly after we arrived the man of the house began to insist that my husband accompany him to a neighborhood gin-mill. We wives were supposed to stay home. My husband does not drink and this man knew it. Finally he said, "Well, I'm going whether you are or not. It's the only time I get to see my neighbors."

I suggested to my husband that we leave for home which we did at 8 p.m. My husband grumbled all the way home saying I had been too hasty. I explained maybe he was too dissatisfied to recognize a slap in the face but I had never been so insulted in my life. I also vowed never again to accept an invitation to that home. He says I'm wrong to take it so seriously. Am I?—HUMILIATED.

Dear Humiliated: I see no justification whatever for the host's behavior. You were right to leave when you did and your husband should not expect you to go there again.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been going to this dentist for two years. He was recommended by a friend. I found out later the "friend" is his cousin.

Last week I had a bad toothache. The dentist said the tooth could not be saved and then he extracted it. The next day the pain persisted so I used a mirror to see what was happening. To my horror I discovered he had pulled the

Arizona Artist Sends Wood-Cuts to Gallery

Four beautifully-executed woodcuts have arrived from Phoenix, Arizona, for the treasure auction to be held at the Art Gallery next Saturday, Feb. 4, at 3 p.m.

The story behind this donation began when Mr. I. G. Natus Banasewicz, well-known Phoenix artist, was vacationing in Victoria last year. He visited the local Art Gallery and was so impressed, decided to become a member. Upon receipt of the bulletin sent regularly to all gallery members, Mr. Banasewicz read of the treasure auction and sent four of his woodcuts as a donation. Nicely mounted, these fine pieces of work are 18 by 9 inches in size.

Doors at the Art Gallery will open on Saturday, Feb. 4, at 1 p.m. for the superlative sale. Treasures of all kinds, including jewelry, china, cut glass, silver and pictures, will be auctioned by Mr. Will Lund at 3 p.m. Arranged by the women's committee, proceeds of the sale and auction will be used to bring art exhibits to Victoria.

Edith Summerskill To Keep Fighting

LONDON (CP) — During the postwar adversity she tried British housewives by declaring that nobody could tell the difference between butter and margarine.

Today she gets abusive letters because of her outspoken campaign to abolish professional boxing.

Like some severe nanny in a nursery of wilful children, Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor member of Parliament for Warrington, has spent most of her political life telling the nation what she thought was good for it.

Now she has been made a baroness. Her reaction is typical: "I am the same person as I was yesterday, with the same conviction, the same ideas, and I shall fight just as actively for them."

How will she like being transplanted from the House of Commons to the fustier atmosphere of the Lords? "They need experienced parliamentarians, and I shall have plenty to say."

FIGHTS FOR WOMEN

The tall, red-blond, 58-year-old doctor has always had plenty to say, usually about women's rights. It has been her most burning preoccupation since 1931, when she was bitten by the political bug making a speech on the mortality among working-class mothers.

"We don't shout enough about the way the country has been transformed," she said recently. "In the 30s we campaigned under the slogan 'It's more dangerous to be a Mother than a Miner.'"

Admittedly she has a remarkable husband in Dr. Jeffery Samuel, a man who believes so passionately in what his wife stands for that he has willingly, over the years, submerged his own identity in hers.

Back in 1934, when Edith fought her first byelection, her Conservative opponent was also called Samuel. To avoid confusion, she changed her name back to Summerskill. Recently her children announced that they, too, wanted to be known as Summerskills.

Does Samuel feel belittled by all this? Not at all, he says. "In this house neither is boss—it is a partnership. I see no reason for a woman to change her name any more than a man. I don't suffer from man's conceit."

ST. ANN'S

The St. Ann's Parents' Association are holding their annual turkey dinner on Saturday, Feb. 11, at the Academy. Sitings will be held hourly, on the hour, from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. inclusive. Co-conveners for the event, under Association president Mr. Alan F. Ritz, are Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Griffin.

Luscious mocha pie.

What's Cooking!

Fabulous Pie Gourmet Fare

Pastry was born in Greece, according to legend, longer ago than anyone can guess. There the ancient pastry-cook first made honey cakes with primitive handmade utensils. Since those bygone days, the imagination of pastry chefs has given us an infinite variety of delectable sweets. To show just how far the fine art of pastry-making has progressed, here is a particularly handsome party pie. It's Mocha Filbert Chiffon — a gourmet's delight. This fabulous pie is reason alone for dessert-and-coffee parties.

Just the right amount of coffee and chocolate give the light mocha filling a delicate, wonderful flavor. Chopped filberts are baked into the flaky crust, and also adorn the top of the pie, filling in the criss-cross design of whipped cream.

When you serve up this sweet beauty, complete the picture with demitasse cups, filled with rich, black coffee.

MOCHA FILBERT CHIFFON PIE

Pastry for 1 crust 9-inch pie, 1/4 cup chopped filberts, 1 envelope unflavored gelatin, 1/4 cup cold coffee, 1 cup sugar, divided, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 semi-sweet chocolate square,

(1 oz.), 1 1/2 cups strong hot coffee, 3 eggs, separated, 1 cup whipping cream, divided, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1/4 cup toasted filberts, chopped.

Line 9-inch pie pan with pastry; flute edge. Press 1/4 cup chopped filberts into crust. Bake in hot oven, 450°, 10 to 12 minutes. Soften gelatin in cold coffee. Mix 1/4 cup sugar, salt and chocolate with hot coffee; stir until chocolate melts. Beat egg yolks slightly. Stir a little of the hot mixture into egg yolks and then blend yolks into hot mixture in saucepan.

Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until it begins to boil. Remove from heat. Stir in softened gelatin until gelatin dissolves. Cool. When mixture is partially set, beat with rotary beater until smooth.

Beat 1/2 cup cream until stiff; add vanilla. Fold into gelatin mixture. Add cream of tartar to egg whites and beat until stiff. Add remaining 1/4 cup sugar and continue beating until glossy. Fold into gelatin mixture.

Place in refrigerator until almost firm. Pie into filbert pie shell. Whip remaining cream. Garnish pie with whipped cream and chopped toasted filberts.

Tips for Parents

By HELEN R. HEWSON

Sir Geoffrey Vickers, who gave the thoughtful and challenging opening address at the Canadian Conference on Children, was asked to learn of our heavy loss of life in traffic accidents.

More than 3,000 Canadians die every year on our streets and highways. Many of these are children under the age of 15.

CARELESSNESS CAUSE Carelessness and traffic violations are responsible for a large per cent of these tragedies. Knowing this, the parents of young children need to take extra precautions this time of year.

The long winter nights are closing in and statistics show a sharp rise in the accident rate during the dusk and dark of late autumn and winter evenings.

NOT ALONE

Small children of, course should not be out alone in the dark at the end of the day. Bring them in.

If their supper is not ready settle them down with book or toys.

Older children returning late from extra-curricular school activities, from the dentist, the music lessons, or from Cub Scouts, Brownies, etc., need to review and remember a few simple safety rules.

If you must walk on the highway, walk facing the traffic and carry a flashlight with bulb and battery in good condition.

Cross busy streets only at corners. If there is a traffic light don't leave the curb if the "don't walk" signal is showing. There isn't time to reach the other side safely.

Do not step into the road at crosswalks without giving the proper signal. Choose a time when the traffic has eased a bit.

Look both ways for cars, trucks, bicycles, especially when crossing a residential street in the middle of the block.

Few people go to the corner to cross over when they want to join a friend or visit a neighbor.

Do not run from between parked cars.

All drivers be alert, careful. That hurrying figure may be your own child.

KING'S DAUGHTERS

At the recent Victoria District, King's Daughters meeting in St. Andrew's Kirk Hall it was decided to send a cheque to cover the cost of a stove for the Retarded Children's Home. Plans were made for the annual daffodil tea, the proceeds of which go towards philanthropic work of the order. Reports from five circles, Fellowship, Goodwill, Hawthorne, Ready-to-Help and Speedwell, were read.

Indian Influence At Hartnell Show

By ROMANNA GEARKE

LONDON (Reuters)—Fitted hip yokes and swinging skirts were the main new note of the spring fashion collection shown here by Norman Hartnell, Queen Elizabeth's dressmaker.

Hartnell started work on his collection only eight days ago because he was busy designing most of the Queen's clothes for her tour of India and Pakistan.

Before the show he apologized that "some of the dresses are tacked together and some we can't show you at all."

But there was general agreement that the collection, shown after the new Paris fashions, was Hartnell's best for several seasons.

The Indian influence was seen in a long, slim evening dress of softly-pleated white chiffon, silver embroidered and called Taj Mahal.

A high-necked, cap-sleeved coat dress, embroidered in white and silver sequins and banded at neck and sleeves with gold braid, also had an Indian look.

And the afterglow of India was reflected in some of the colors used by Hartnell—jade green, moonlight blue, coral pink and dazzling white.

Some suits had gently flared skirts but most were pencil-slim and the slim skirts, discarded by most London couturiers, was used in some dresses.

Coats were swinging and collarless or unobtrusively collared, many in big checks.

The new importance of hip-lines de-emphasized the bosom on day-time clothes and produced what Hartnell called a "flat-figured" look.

Minuteman Soars

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States took a big step toward pushing Atlantic range in a successful warfare capability Wednesday first flight test.

Gen. Thomas White, air chief of staff, called the launching "one of the most significant steps this nation has taken towards gaining supremacy in the critical years ahead."

Today's launch, he said, "is the most recent in a series of successes which have marked the Minuteman program since its inception, and which will lead to having the Minuteman operational at least a year earlier than was at first thought possible."

The solid-fuel missile, a low-priced but high-powered "compact" ICBM, now is expected to be combat-ready by mid-1962.

It was the fifth rocket success for the United States in 24 hours, closely following the orbiting of a Samos "spy" satellite; the launching and recovery from space of a chimpanzee in a Mercury astronaut capsule; and two successful firings of Bomarc-B intercepter missiles.

Oxford Censors Blunt Pens Of Student Lecture Critics

LONDON (UPI)—Oxford University has clamped down on its last week published re-views of five lectures, two of which were harshly panned and one of which was criticised more mildly. The other two got what might be called good notices.

The words "censored by the proctors" appeared yesterday on an otherwise blank page of the undergraduate magazine Isis for which student critics had prepared commentaries.

Planning Budget Boost Opposed

An increase this year in the budget of the Capital Region Planning Board was opposed yesterday by city council finance committee.

"I move we don't go (or more than last year," said Mayor Percy Scurrell, after the committee was informed the city's share of the CRPB budget this year would be $1,119 higher. "That's the policy we're going to follow with city salaries, I am quite sure."

The provincial municipal board has almost completed an urban renewal survey, the mayor said, "has been studying the area in general for five or six years, and I can't see any reason for an increase in salaries: the work now should be just routine."

"If we don't watch and prune it down it's going to grow into a real burden."

Climate's the Villain

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

If you remember, the first Colonist seed offer last year was of the Zvolanek multiflora sweet pea. Reports generally were pretty enthusiastic, with many readers getting as many as seven and eight flowers per stem and on good long stems. The blooms were, sweetly fragrant, too—many of the varieties are a bit short on scent.

One point, however, which I found disappointing was the rather poor percentage of germination. I think we sent out about dozen seeds to the packet and, judging by the letters received, the average reader got only about eight plants, with one-third of the seeds failing to come up. This factor had me rather worried, for germination tests under laboratory conditions indicated that the seeds were almost 100 per cent viable. Why would they sprout in the laboratory growth chamber, yet fail to come up in the garden?

I think the answer lies in the origin of the seeds. We have all experienced the difficulty of germinating the hard-skinned sweet pea seeds and this hard skin is a definite characteristic of certain varieties. But the Zvolanek seeds were grown in California, and the California weather in the summer of 1959 was such as to make these hard skins even harder—as hard perhaps as the seeds of the Russell lupin.

It seems to me that we would have been better off if we had adopted the Russell lupin technique in preparing the Zvolanek seeds for sowing. With lupin seeds, the hard coat is chipped with the point of a knife, or a small hole filed in it, and the seeds are soaked for 12 hours in shallow, tepid water. With moisture entering through the tiny hole, the internal parts of the seed swell, achieving germination.

There is another and opposite hazard that the sweet pea fancier must overcome. The seeds of some varieties are occasionally so soft-skinned that they rot in the soil before they can germinate. The variety Princess Elizabeth is a notorious offender in this regard, especially when sown in cold, overly wet soil.

Here again, climate plays its part. Seeds of Princess Elizabeth grown in California seem less likely to rot than those produced, say, in the cool, moist climate of Scotland. Home-grown sweet pea seeds produced commercially in and around Duncan are just about right; neither too hard nor too soft-skinned for easy germination.

I have come to be a great believer in the use of a protective seed dressing on all rot-prone seeds. There are a number of these powders on the market—Spergon, Arasan and the like—and I wouldn't dream of sowing peas, sweet peas, beans, corn or nasturtiums without this protective coating.

A simple method is to moisten the seeds slightly, then shake them up in a jar with a spoonful of the seed dressing just before sowing. Most of the chemicals used for this purpose are poisonous, though, and it is important to keep your hands away from your mouth and eyes while sowing the treated seeds and to wash very thoroughly after the sowing is completed.

John Crosby Critic at Large

Digging Under the Dandruff

Down at 154 Bleecker, a street which forms the twisting Jugular vein of Greenwich Village, the very heart of Off Broadway, you'll find The Premise, which is a nightclub, a show, an idea—all rolled into one.

The premises of The Premise are a basement naturally. As George Kaufman has observed, the deeper into the bowels of the earth the customers go, the greater the thrill of discovery. The show (as opposed to the place) consists of four gifted and quick-witted performers—three fellows and a girl who can play a boy if she has to—who play sketches, black-outs and improvisations with great relish and great speed. You're just savoring the act in front of you when the lights go out and they're dashing back with something fresh.

Since the revue has, alas, disappeared from the stage, since television's great satirist Sid Caesar has fled to Las Vegas, the last refuge of satire and the satiric sketch seems to be the supper club, and the Greenwich Village basement.

Chief perpetrator of this merri-ment is Theodore J. Flicker, who is director-producer-actor and emcee, and the subjects tackled in these brief flings are fresh. For instance, Mr. Flicker will remind us that little Caroline Kennedy suddenly appeared in her mother's shoes at one of her father's press conferences at home. Then, they'll do a skit with Joan Darling playing little Caroline and turning out to be the brains of the family, advising her father on who to appoint—Harvard professors "and stuff like that." It's a funny idea that it's Caroline, not old Joe, that's masterminding the family and it will probably be dropped if it gets stale. That's the great advantage of a show as fluid and flexible as this one. It can keep up.

The four players at The Premise, for instance, do a very funny skit of the American movies about Nazis made in 1943 as opposed to the movies made about Nazis now. As done then, every German is a schweinhund; now there's only one Nazi and all the other Germans deplore him as much as we do. There is very sharp, penetrating, aseptic humor about the Kennedys, that cruise ship that's been pirated, David Susskind interviewing Khrushchev, the first woman doctor in the White House and a poor little nation trying to join the atomic club and being turned down because it is irresponsible.

However, there are some fairly permanent ones. The gag about God and the magician (trying to get into heaven—the magician has a better magic act) is great fun and also about as irreverent as you can get. Another skit I found delicious and compelling and adult and very funny was that about a girl in analysis bawling how to play chess and putting each move into psychiatric terms.

Broadway has got so square—what few jokes you'll hear on Broadway sound thoroughly researched to be sure they won't offend anyone. The stimulation at The Premise is entirely cerebral.

Hollywood Today By Sheilah Graham

Drop 'Cleopatra' in Nile

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Twentieth Century Fox would be smart to plop "Cleopatra" into the Nile—or else bring the production back entirely to Hollywood. That's what star Elizabeth Taylor wants—and whatever Lizzie wants she usually gets. She would rather forget the whole long, costly business.

Sal Mineo, very slender and hanging on to his new figure, has been doing the evening spots with pretty Tina Louise.

Shirley Booth, who held out so long against television, is going the whole way with a series. I hope her decision is right. Shirley found hard to do all her recent plays that failed. The only one she didn't want to do was her great hit, "Come Back, Little Sheba."

Joan Blondell is reversing the trend and coming back to Hollywood to live. She rented an apartment here for two years. Joan is in demand again because of her good performance as Ma Barker in the televised show, "The Witness."

Robert Ryan has owned a plot of land at Malibu Beach for 10 years. "When are you going to build?" I asked him. "Probably never," Bob replied.

Jack Palance has been in Hollywood renewing his acquaintance with his children. Can't stay too long away from Switzerland though, because of taxes.

Glenn Ford's co-starring assignment with Bette Davis in Frank Capra's "Pocketful of Miracles" reminds me of when Bette insisted on having Glenn in her movie, "A Stolen Life," about 15 years ago. Glenn had just come out of the service, his salary was $250 a week. The studio—Warners—wanted Robert Alda. "I want Glenn," said Bette, who was then at the top of her career. This time it is Glenn who said, "I want Bette." And his salary nowadays hovers between $250,000 and $300,000 a picture.

"How is Clark Gable in 'The Misfits'?" many of my friends ask me. It's very good, but this is the film that caused his death. The role of wrangler was much too strenuous for a man who would have been 60 yesterday. The day the movie opened, it's anguish to see him straining and to hear his heavy breathing as he tussles with the horses. If Clark had turned down the tempting $750,000, I believe he would be alive today.

And how is Marilyn Monroe as the Reno divorcee in the movie scripted by her now ex-husband, Arthur Miller? She is Marilyn Monroe. Even in her most dramatic scene where she is screaming "murderers!" at Gable, Eli Wallach and Montgomery Clift, MM is wiggling all over the warm desert sands. And director John Huston almost shows the complete Monroe in a couple of low-cut, tight dresses. Audiences will gasp.

And how is Arthur Miller as a movie writer? Very serious, very profound. You get the feeling that he is writing about himself, his marriage with Marilyn and the suffering of all the "Misfits" in the world—of which there are too many.

LET'S TALK

By Rudolf Flesch

A fund-raising letter came in the mail from the alumni association of my wife's school. It's a small, private girls' academy and the letter is refreshingly unassuming and simple.

It contains a mimeographed list of those who contributed last year, plus a brief comparison of the results of last year's drive with that of the year before.

The chairman of the finance committee writes, "As a treasurer of the association, I in every day.

am again taking this opportunity to inform you of the results of the program which this year are gratifying, showing an increase of $376 over the first year's attempt."

How nice and simple that is, compared with the flood of fund-raising letters that come from the association.

Expensive Prose

Think of all the fancy printing, the long lists of nationally prominent board members, the expensive photographs and the lush Madison Avenue prose and slick professionalism now being used to enlist our dollars—yours and mine—in the fight against this or that disease or this or that cause.

I confess that, as far as I am concerned, a fraction has been in long ago, and I now usually contribute in direct proportion to the simplicity of the approach used. In other words, if the letterhead is festooned with celebrities and the text is wrought by a professional hand-render, the thing goes into the wastebasket right away. Nor do I hesitate for a moment to throw away seals, picture stamps, small unusable gift items, personalized this-or-that and so on.

But if it's a letter from a small organization that obviously can't afford to pay a professional fund-raiser and just passes the hat by mail, the approach used in other words, if the letterhead is

Costly Hullabaloo

I know that if I send them a dollar or two, or perhaps five, they'll use the money for purposes I approve of rather than putting virtually all of it into further expensive fund-raising hullabaloo. So I usually send them a dollar or two—or perhaps five.

This isn't meant as a solicitation of fund-raising letters from small organizations. I'm simply saying that the great, well-heeled national foundations have no real moral claim against poor individual you or me. Let them go where the big money is—let them collect their gifts and beguile from millionaires and top executives who'll be glad to deduct them from their upper-bracket income taxes.

As for you and me, our consciences will be clear as long as we give our mites to our local church or library or hospital or to a few other small charities that are close to our hearts.

No One Hired by City In Winter Work Plan

City council finance committee yesterday asked for a report on the number of men given employment by Victoria's government-aided winter work program.

Its action followed an assertion by Ald. Geoffrey Edgell that he knew of no one who had obtained work and the public works committee's recommendation that a Greater Victoria conference on the problem be called.

"In this winter work program," Mayor Percy Scurrell said, "we have got to do one of two things. We can do work with our own men, keeping them busy when they otherwise would be laid off, or we can lay off our men and take on others, and the city engineer obviously is going to prefer to keep his experienced crews."

15 Mass Crimes List for Eichmann

JERUSALEM — Adolf Eichmann, accused Nazi mass murderer, was formally charged by Israel with a part in wiping out the Czech village of Lidice in 1942 and with 14 other counts of alleged crimes against humanity and the Jewish people.

It was the first time specific charges have been placed against Eichmann, 54, since Israeli intelligence agents seized him in Argentina almost a year ago. Trial begins March 15.

Don't Walk Alone After Dark Police Chiefs Advise Women

Young women should not go out alone after dark for their own safety.

Police chiefs of Greater Victoria joined Sister Mary Renalda, director of nursing at St. Joseph's Hospital, in this advice yesterday.

Their warning followed an incident Tuesday at 9 p.m. in which a nurse in training at St. Joseph's was menaced by a man with a handkerchief over his face, who said he had a knife in his pocket and "did not want money."

It's always wiser, the police chiefs agreed, for any young woman who has to go out after dark to try to get a companion. If that's not possible, she should avoid as much as possible areas where street lighting is not good, and walk on the outside edge of the sidewalk.

Often it is advisable for her to walk a block or two out of her way to dodge the dark stretches.

Police Chief John Blackstock of Victoria said: "It's hard to advise in cases like this. No two streets are alike."

FEW IDENTIFIED
Police Chiefs W. A. Pearson of Saanich and Robert Smith of Oak Bay added a plea for greater observation on the part of the public—young women or others.

"We hate to suggest the need for such precautions here," they said, "but there have been cases such as this."

"Many cases never come to justice," said Chief Smith, "because of lack of identification."

MAKE NOTE
"We realize that fright plays a natural and big part in any such incident, but urge anyone involved in such a threat, or who sees suspicious persons hanging about, to make particular note of some characteristic of the suspect—either of clothing, appearance or accent."

"With something positive to go on, police could take more definite steps."

'New Moon' Needs Men

Male voices are needed for the forthcoming production of Sigmund Romberg's "New Moon," to be presented in May in the Royal Theatre by the Victoria Gilbert and Sullivan Society.

Men interested in taking part should phone Mrs. A. Senior at EV 4-3019.

Father, Family Flee From Angry Whites

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Segregationists won their fight yesterday to restore the total white boycott at newly-integrated McDonogh 19 Elementary School, forcing a white family to move from the city.

Johnson Thompson, 33-year-old Alabama-born soda fountain employee, took his family from New Orleans during the night. Two of his sons, Gregory, 9 and Michael, 8, were enrolled in McDonogh school, the first white children to attend McDonogh since Nov. 17, the third day of integration.

Walgreen's Drug Stores, which employs Thompson, announced Tuesday morning he had requested transfer to another city. The firm would not reveal where he was sent.

That's Show Business

By Dick Williams

Orson Welles' interview was one of the most difficult Edward R. Murrow and his Person to Person staff ever arranged.

When they wanted him, Welles was preparing "King Lear" and "Volpone" for the New York Centre and would do no interviews until after he opened. Dick Maney, the series' press agent, reminded him that this would be difficult, since Person to Person was seen live on Friday nights at a time when Welles would be on stage.

Orson had other objections. "Murrow interviews subjects in their homes, and I haven't got one." He and his wife, then expecting a baby, were temporarily living at the Volney hotel.

After numerous futile calls and letters to Welles, Maney gave up the project entirely. Some time later, Welles' secretary reported that Orson would be available to appear on the show the following Friday; his plays having concluded their runs.

There were still complications, as TV editor Marie Torre reported. "All that the Person to Person people have to do is find out if Welles has an apartment, and if he has one, where it is, and begin setting up for the telecast. They expect to learn, too, whether Mrs. Welles will be on the show, now that she's no longer pregnant. . . . What is unusual says Mr. Aron (Murrow's assistant) 'is to have a subject who doesn't know where he lives.'"

Producer Henry Margolis came to the rescue with a suite at the Sulgrave Hotel, and the interview finally came off. Orson was eloquent, impressive and majestic.

P-Xs Root of Trouble Of Americans Abroad

MONTREAL (UPI) — Dr. was a little put out," Mrs. Arnold Toynbee, Britain's noted historian-author, left Canada last night for the University of Pennsylvania where he will spend a semester heading a seminar on philosophy of history.

Before his departure Dr. Toynbee said the thing in Kennedy's platform which appealed to him most "is his plan for a world-wide peace corps."

"It seems to me that that is the right approach," he said.

Dr. Toynbee said most of the Americans' troubles overseas could be wrapped up in two letters:

"P-X."

COME FROM EXCHANGES
Everything Americans overseas buy comes from these post exchanges, he noted.

"I realize that a great deal of the reasoning is motivated by health and hygiene," he added. "But they carry it too far sometimes." When you don't eat and drink your host's food you automatically build a barrier.

On a recent trip abroad, the Toynbees subtlety their London home to some Americans. Before leaving, Mrs. Toynbee left a list of all the necessary shopping spots with their cook to pass on to their American tenants.

Prince Must Relinquish His Commoner Sweetheart

LONDON (AP)—A British newspaper reports that Crown Prince Harald of Norway is in love with the pretty daughter of an Oslo store owner but has been told he cannot marry her because it would jeopardize the monarchy.

Instead, the tabloid Daily Sketch says, King Olav wants his handsome heir to marry Princess Sophia of Greece, 22-year-old daughter of King Paul.

Prince Harald is 24. Both his sisters married commoners and lost rights to the throne.

The prince's friendship with Sonia Haraldsen, 23, has been common knowledge in Norway for some time. Neither her friends nor palace sources in Oslo would comment on the report in the Daily Sketch.

The plan calls for using the British Blue Streak missile as a first stage, an unspecified French rocket as a second stage and a third stage built by a group of other states.

At the Art Gallery

Mysterious Quality Can Not Be Copied

By INA D. D. UTHOFF

Some of the more recent additions to our permanent collection will be on view for a few days before arrival of the collection from the Abbott Laboratories, which is being circulated by the American Federation of Arts.

Looking around at our own permanent collection or, at any rate, at the part of it that is being shown, I felt a sense of pride that we are assembling a collection of which any city might be proud.

It is not every art gallery that can include a Boudin, a Sickert or an Adrian Van Der Velde in its collection or have such a variety of treasures to draw on when necessary.

Recently some beautifully designed textiles from the San Blas Islands off Panama have been added, colorful and unique examples of native origin.

Then there are the Guatemalan pieces, each a masterpiece of design and execution. Interspersed with paintings, recently acquired, the tremendous power of the African sculpture reminds us that this is one of the world's most remarkable cultural forms, arising from strong emotional experience and tribal beliefs.

Primitive Designs On Show

It is a genuinely primitive art which has expressed the natural sense of design typical of most African primitive sculpture.

We have only to study the mask from the Dan tribe of Liberia to be moved by the "bigness" of the conception and the mastery of the design. "Mother and Child," another beautiful piece from the same source, makes one ask oneself the question, "Can this mysterious quality inherent in primitive African sculpture ever be copied by artists of other nationalities?" I would be inclined to say "no."

Only the superficial mannerisms are captured. The essence has eluded them.

Another strongly tribal art, the Argillite totem carvings of the Haida Indians of the Queen Charlotte Islands, expresses a completely different source but can be thought of as primitive sculpture in a condensed form.

There is a beautiful example included in this collection.

Area Eyes Skies

Rivers
Rising

DUNCAN — Cowichan residents still in the throes of mopping up after one of the worst winter floods in the district's history are again casting fearful glances at swelling rivers and lowering skies.

Rains which started sporadically two days ago settled down to a steady downpour yesterday and district streams and rivers which forced the evacuation of homes and destroyed roads and bridges two weeks ago started to rise again.

THREE FEET — Highway department officials said the Koksilah River has risen three feet and the Cowichan River only slightly less after more than two inches of rain.

"We are sure worried about it," said Andy Anand, a hard-hit Wall subdivision resident who had to evacuate last month.

"We just can't afford it again."

Water in Somenos Creek which flooded the subdivision "couldn't be seen from the house Tuesday but it was flooding yesterday and it is now coming back across the field," he said.

HUGE ROCKS —

Highway crews are expected to start dumping huge rocks into the Cowichan at Clemens Bridge today in an effort to stop erosion. An estimated 60 feet of bank has been torn out.

Rain has fallen in most parts of Cowichan during the last few days and snow has piled up on mountains at Cowichan Lake.

South of the city the Cowichan River was still high and rising in the area where another 20 families evacuated their homes. Dwight Green, the man who warned most of them at 3 a.m. Jan. 15 said he tried to get across the flooded area but the water is too deep.

Already occupants of some houses in the area have had to start mopping-up operations again.

At Clemens Bridge delta land has been eaten away to within two feet of a power pole that will likely have to be moved.

Highways officials say that five Indian homes are threatened if the bank is torn away any more. An official has said a break-through is possible.

"We're keeping a close watch on it," said Ted Marsh, highways foreman.

STILL CLOSED —

In the River Bottom district west of here a 200-yard section of road is still closed where a new channel of the Cowichan broke through and cut into the bank.

The road has a 40-foot drop. It is believed the bank is still giving way and is causing the muddy condition of the river.

North Cowichan Reeve Donald Morton said yesterday the "solution" to flooding lies in a survey made four years ago for the Indian department which suggests a $235,000 relocation of the rivers at Cowichan Bay as well as new roads and bridges.

In a report to council he said a meeting was held recently with officials of several governments and that they will likely continue with "monthly meetings that may continue for years."

Suicides Fewer In South

Suicide rate is lower on the southern end of Vancouver Island — the mid-island health officer Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy said yesterday, but still it's comparatively high.

Health officer Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie of Nanaimo reported Tuesday that the mid-island rate last year was 18 per 100,000 persons. This, he said, was twice as high a rate as Ontario's and nine times as high as Newfoundland's.

Greater Victoria, Dr. Mahaffy said, had 16 recorded suicides last year among its 152,000 residents, for a rate of slightly more than 10 per 100,000.

But, like Dr. Mackenzie, she had no definite reason to offer for the high rate. Many theories exist, Dr. Mackenzie said, "but they are just theories."

Dim Light, Wet Road Contribute to Crash

Dim light, poor visibility and rain-soaked streets all played a part in a collision at Camosun and Rudlin which sent two to hospital last night.

It was one of a flurry of accidents which kept police busy yesterday.

June Mollin, 3405 Seymour, and Paul R. Johns, 19, Redwood Park Motel, were released from Royal Jubilee Hospital after treatment.

Police said the cars involved were driven by John and Marcel Mollin, 3405 Seymour.

"I thought the cars were coming into my garden," said Mrs. W. A. Roper, 1304 Rudlin. "The crash shook the whole house."

She said the street light on the corner had been out for the last two nights.

Gladys Atkinson, 2789 Cedar Hill Cross Road, was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital and treated for minor leg and hip injuries suffered when she was hit by a car at Yates and Quadra. She was released later.

Police said the car was driven by J. Van Pelt, 1414 Brooke.

Two cars were heavily damaged but there were no injuries in a rear-end collision at Pandora and Blanshard. Police said the cars were driven by Joseph Veitch, 2640 Asquith, and Louis Binks, 1443 Stroud.

On Richmond, near Royal Jubilee Hospital nurses' residence, a car driven by Herta Bishop, 305 Montreal, collided with the rear of a car driven by Erith Smith, 1812 Fairfield, police said.

Cars driven by Alice Popma, 3301 Quadra, and Dorothy M. Stark, 719 Gorge, collided at Chambers and Grant with light damage, police reported.

A parked car owned by Nand Lal 831 Queens was hit by a car driven by Walter Jackson, HMCS Margaree.

Put Chant Report to Test Teachers' Body Urges B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Teachers' Federation yesterday asked the B.C. government to take no action on the Chant commission report on education at the present session of the legislature.

Stan Evans, assistant secretary, said the recommendation, which he said constituted a major change in education philosophy in the province, should be tried on an experimental basis before being put into general use.

The federation said teachers should have a say before the government makes laws based on the recommendations.

The commission had done an excellent job but its members were not educational experts.

Councillor's Switch Reprieve for Reeve

Spanish Reeve George Chatterton last night was given a reprieve, but not a victory, for his plan to build a new joint fire-police headquarters on Swan Lake property at Haynes Road and Douglas Street.

At a special meeting of council, Coun. Ainslie Worthington reversed his previous stand and moved that council continue with expropriation proceedings to find out the cost of the privately-owned land.

Coun. Worthington, Reeve George Chatterton and Coun. Leslie Passmore make up council's special building committee appointed to arrange for the building of the joint headquarters.

At a meeting last week

Coun. Worthington and Passmore outvoted Reeve Chatterton in favoring a nearby site on Vernon Street.

The building committee's recommendation was read to last night's meeting but Coun. Worthington said he had spent some time checking into the suitability of the Haynes Road site after last week's meeting.

"Seeing we can still back out if we don't pay over the money," Coun. Worthington moved that council go ahead to find what it would cost to buy the Haynes Road site.

Once the cost is found through arbitration proceedings the council will then vote on whether to build on the Haynes Road site.

The reeve favors the Vernon Street property as the site of a new municipal hall.

Each Would Benefit Join Chest Drive Red Cross Urged

A city representative at the annual meeting of the Victoria Red Cross has asked the organization's new executive to consider allying the group with the Greater Victoria Community Chest.

Ald. Michael Griffin said last night he had not made the suggestion in his role as a personal representative to the meeting from the mayor's office but as his own.

He said that insofar as he is able he will try to bring the Red Cross and other large

Chest holdout groups into the community appeal.

He said he believes that Red Cross campaigns would stop falling short of their objectives if the organization would join the Chest, and that Chest campaigns would stop falling short if all the holdouts would join.

New Red Cross president Ernest Heybrook said last night the suggestion has not been considered by the directors, but that it would be if the city requests such a move.

Tougher Labor Laws Sure in B.C.

Strike
Curbs Likely

By PETER BRUTON

Tougher labor legislation will be introduced by the provincial government later this session, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson indicated yesterday.

Observers believe the legislation will include provisions cancelling the payroll check off of union dues and steps to make it harder for unions to strike and employers to lock-out.

BOTH SIDES

Mr. Peterson, speaking on labor-management relations, told the legislature there were activities on the part of both employers and unions that were not conducive to harmonious relations.

"Other activities unduly restrict the freedom of the individual and, in our view, violate his basic democratic rights," said the minister. "In certain instances, some degree of corrective action is within the authority of this legislature, and legislation covering these and other matters will be placed before you for your consideration as early as possible."

FIRM OPINION

The minister, who took over the department after the defeat of former minister Lyle Wicks in the last election, said he was firmly of the opinion there should be no little government interference as was compatible with the public welfare.

"However, we have a responsibility to every individual, whether he is a member of a union or not," said Mr. Peterson. "We will not shrink from our own responsibility to protect the basic and democratic rights of a free people."

MORE SPECIFIC

CCF members in the opposition asked the minister to be more specific about what the legislation would entail but he refused to do so.

"I know the opposition will try to misinterpret any legislation brought in about labor," said Mr. Peterson. "Just as they misinterpreted the Labor Relations Act."

"But we will be fair to labor, we will be fair to management, we will be fair to the public of this province," he said.

STRECY STAND

There has been widespread speculation that more labor legislation would be introduced since former agriculture minister Negroni Stacey told a delegation of farmers that Bill 43 (Trade Unions Act) was "just the beginning" and that "tougher laws were being planned."

At that time Premier Bennett denied the Social Credit government had ever passed any legislation which hurt the working man.

GREAT MISTAKE

Mr. Peterson said yesterday there was bound to be a conflict of interest between labor and management but it was a great mistake to assume that labor and management must always have diametrically opposed interests and that unions and management should be engaged in a class war.

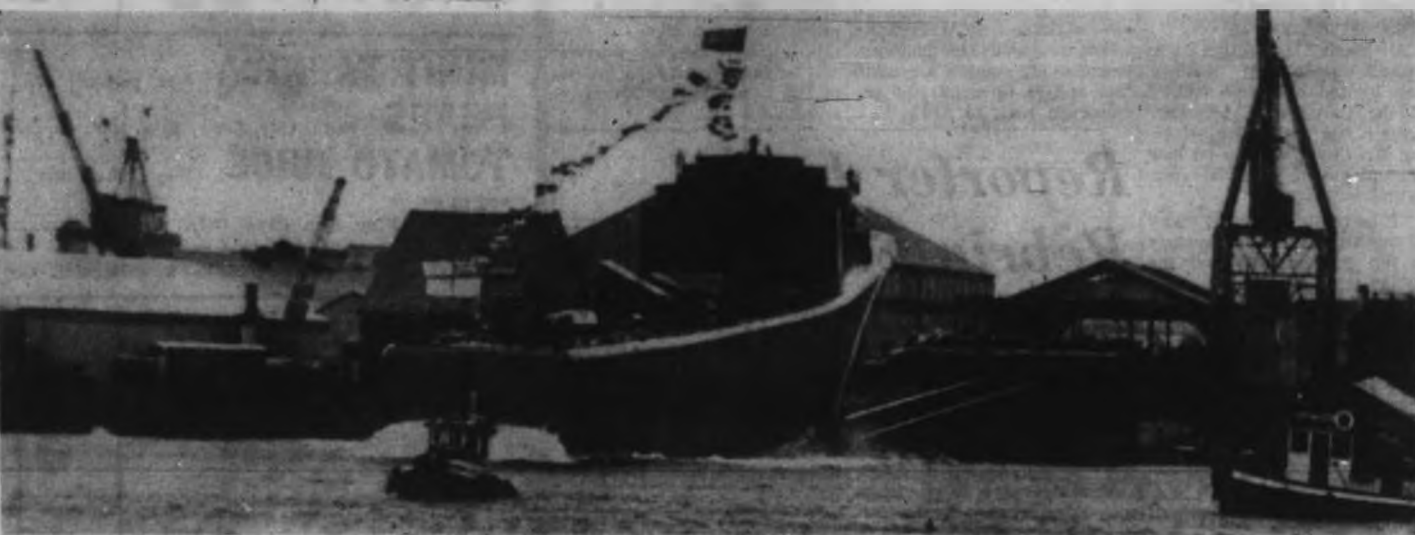

"Those who perpetuate class warfare between labor and management are doing a very great disservice to the people of B.C.," he said.

Heavy rainfalls caused extensive flooding in the area.

Last Ship Contract Slides into Sea

By IAN STREET

The shipbuilding industry on the west coast is in danger of "disintegrating overnight" because there is no work to keep skilled craftsmen here, Harold

Husband, president of Victoria Machinery Depot, said here yesterday.

If this is allowed to happen, Mr. Husband told guests assembled for the launching of the new destroyer escort Saskatchewan at VMD, the task of rebuilding the industry "will be a long and arduous one."

NO WORK IN HAND

He said the yard—"one of the most efficient shipbuilding organizations in Canada"—has no shipbuilding work in hand when the Saskatchewan moves to Yarrow's Ltd. in a few weeks for its completion.

"We can't, like Mr. McEwen, wait for something to turn up," said Mr. Husband. "We are encouraged by the decision of the B.C. government to build a third ferry ... and the recently announced new federal shipbuilding program."

NEED HELP NOW

"But we on the west coast need help now ... and if we are to keep our best men working we must have ships to build."

A spray of champagne mixed with driving rain as Mrs. H. S. Rayner, wife of the chief naval staff, triggered the launching apparatus.

For a long minute, as invited guests crowded to the rail of the launching platform, the hull refused to budge on the ways. Then as VMD crews swung into action, compressed air rams nudged the Saskatchewan into motion.

Spectators cheered, the naval band played "Hearts of Oak," as the vessel, wearing a red undercoat of paint and gaily decked with flags, slid smoothly down to the sea.

NORTH PACIFIC

Vice-Admiral H. S. Rayner, chief of naval staff, told shivering guests and officials the chill winds and driving rain represented "typical North Pacific weather." He said Canada's shipyards are an "essential link" that keeps the RCN combat-ready.

The admiral said the Saskatchewan and five others like her now being built elsewhere in Canada are basically the same as the Restigouche class of destroyer escorts now in service with the RCN.

"These ships were designed and built to meet the threat of the modern submarine," said Admiral Rayner. "They have proved in exercises with live submarines their ability to do just that."

Mr. Husband said that in recent years VMD has spent $1,000,000 on new plants and thousands more dollars on training men for diversification of its operations. But he pointed out that of six B.C. shipyards that together built more than 50 per cent of Canada's wartime shipping, only two now remain in operation.

AFTER FATAL HIT-RUNBloody Clothing
May Hold Clue

A bundle of torn and bloodstained clothing may hold the only clue to the identity of a hit-run driver who last night took the life of Victoria's second 1961 traffic death victim.

The broken body of 83-year-old Hubert H. Hollier, 2336 Lee, was left lying in the gutter along rain-slick Fort Street 100 feet west of Trent.

NO WITNESSES

Up to early this morning police had found no eyewitnesses to the fatal accident.

Examination of the road surface failed to produce any telltale shattered headlight glass or other evidence.

Police are pinning their hopes on the conscience of the driver and, failing that, the possibility that microscopic flakes of the death-car's paint may be imbedded in the victim's clothing.

BOTTLE OF BRANDY

Ironically, Hollier was on his way to buy a bottle of medicinal brandy which he needed to combat a heart condition.

Police said that if he was in the nearest pedestrian lane when struck he was bowled and dragged some 100 feet by the fleeing car.

First report of the fatal accident was received by city police from Mrs. Lloyd Briggs, 1958 Fort, who lives just a few feet from where Hollier's body was found a few minutes before 6 p.m.

HEARD A THUD

"We were sitting in the living room when we heard a thud and a roaring car engine," she said.

Her husband looked out the window, saw the victim's lifeless form on the wet street and called to his wife to telephone police. He failed to catch sight of the vehicle.

Within seconds an all-points police bulletin covering the Victoria to Campbell River portion of Vancouver Island flashed out over police radio frequencies.

SEVERELY HAMPERED

But from the outset police were severely hampered by lack of any description of the vehicle.

Service stations were alerted in the Greater Victoria area to watch for a vehicle bearing fresh front-end damage but with headlights probably still intact.

Employees of at least three stores in the shopping centre across the street said they saw or heard nothing during a driving rainstorm when the accident happened.

ON LOOKOUT

Police Chief John Blackstock said "every man is on the lookout for the car and driver, we are trying not to leave a single loop-hole—this man is a killer and must be found."

Traffic officers also appealed to anyone who may have seen the 5:45 a.m. accident. They are asked to telephone EV 4-4111.

"Anyone can have an accident—but let's hope this driver has the guts to own up to it," said the chief.

The fatal accident was the second in Victoria during the past week. William Mendres died Jan. 28 after being struck by a fire truck while driving at Johnson and Quadra, Jan. 27.

Race to Loot

MONTREAL (CP) — Detectives Wednesday discovered $234,000 worth of stolen bonds in a cardboard box in an east-end lane minutes before the box was scheduled to be picked up by garbage collectors.

Police, who had received a tip from an anonymous telephone caller, said some of the bonds had been stolen last July from a Quebec bank.

Pirates Free Captives Today
Mutiny, Hunger New Threats

RECIFE, Brazil (UPI) — Captive passengers aboard the hijacked cruise ship Santa Maria shouted to passing boats that their Portuguese pirate captors would land them today, just before their fresh water supply gives out.

Shortage of food and water aboard the broiling-hot vessel, the threat of mutiny by the crew and growing official impatience over rebel demands for guarantees that they can keep the ship pointed to a final settlement today of the 12-day buccannery odyssey from the Spanish Main to this tropic port just south of the equator.

New Brazilian President Janio Quadros sent a message to pirate chief Henrique Galvao late last night. Word, in Rio De Janeiro was that Quadros, who has granted the rebels asylum if they want it, might also let them leave Recife unmolested with the ship if the 330 passengers and all of the 350 crewmen desiring to disembark are first put ashore.

The U.S. navy declared the ship was in Brazilian waters and said it was withdrawing from the chase, leaving the fate of the liner and passengers up to Brazil.

The Santa Maria was at the mouth of Recife harbor, three miles off shore. Brazil said the U.S. could take the 42 Americans off at sea, but the navy said this was too risky in the ground swell.

Access Solution Seen

Forest Firms
May Lift Gates

By ALEC MERRIMAN

More and better public access to Vancouver Island forest areas by next summer appeared likely yesterday as developments pointed toward better understanding between logging companies, the government and the public.

Elk River Timber Co. told the Colonist it will take an immediate second look at the problem of public access over its section of the road to Gold River and Nuchalat Arm on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood said he put wheels in motion yesterday to organize a series of roundtable meetings between principals concerned to discuss the access question on a sensible basis and find a solution of mutual advantage.

A recent change in the upper level management at Scott Paper Co., which controls Elk River Timber, gives hope for a better understanding and more amiable negotiation on public access.

The special deputy minister's committee, under chairmanship of deputy lands minister E. W. Bassett, which has been set up to study and recommend on access problems has at last settled down to intensified serious meetings. Three meetings have been held in the last week.

Recreation Minister Westwood said he will delve deeply into the access problem when he speaks Friday in the Throne Speech debate in the legislature.

News of the Elk River Timber Company's second look at access from Campbell River to the west coast was given exclusively to the Colonist by

Easy Liquor for Minors
Rapped by Magistrate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Magistrate Oscar Orr called on authorities Wednesday to investigate the apparent ease with which minors can obtain liquor in local drinking establishments.

"This is the umpteenth case this month involving minors in beer parlors," he said, placing Edward Jones, 15, on probation for a year for theft of a pickup truck.

He called Jones a "by-product of one of our biggest industries."

Area Fears 'Hook' in Amalgamation 'Bait'

By R. O. MARRION

Wary of hooks, Greater Victoria municipal leaders yesterday sniffed and turned away from the bait J. Donald Smith proposes the government should use to try to bring about amalgamation.

The Victoria Social Credit MLA suggested Tuesday that the government offer a reward for a "yes" vote on amalgamation—$500,000 as a centennial gift in 1962 and $200,000 a year for 10 years. He said amalgamation would put the amalgamation ahead because of the savings which would follow.

City officials saw a hook in his reference to provincial savings.

The province now pays annual grants to municipalities on a sliding scale, from $16 per capita for the first 3,500 residents down to $6.60 per capita for all over 50,000.

Greater Victoria as a single municipality, according to a rough estimate, would receive $250,000 a year less from the provincial government than as four separate municipalities.

And because cities must pay for highway construction within their boundaries, amalgamated Victoria might have to pay for Blenheim Street extension in Saanich. This cost, expected to exceed $600,000, will be paid by the province under present circumstances.

"If it would result in this much less aid," said Mayor Percy Scurren, "it would be no good. To heck with that! We're not looking for less, we're looking for more."

Regardless of this factor, said Reeve George Murdoch of Oak Bay, his municipality's share of a $200,000 grant would be equivalent to less than one mill of taxation, "and Oak Bay property-owners' taxes would go up at least nine mills in the event of amalgamation. So where would the taxpayer get off?"

"I haven't changed my opinion," said Reeve A. C. Wurtels of Esquimalt.

"We're doing very nicely, and the intermunicipal committee is working well. We feel this way, that we like the personalized service of our own municipality, and until the present system falls to work well, why make any changes?"

Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich was not available for comment.

Rules Aim At Few

By TED SHACKLEFORD

"Less than five per cent of students" were involved in incidents which prompted new rules to govern the conduct of all students in Sooke school district, trustee John Williams said last night.

"Our school board acknowledges that the behavior of the very vast majority of students in our schools is above reproach," he said. "The board regrets the inference that the general behavior has been otherwise."

IN OCTOBER

Mr. Williams added that the rules were imposed in October at Milnes Landing Junior-Senior High School, following complaints by a delegation of parents.

The rules worked so well at Milnes Landing that they were extended to cover Belmont High School and Elizabeth Fisher Junior High School.

And, the Colonist found yesterday, some Greater Victoria schools have rules similar to some of those imposed by the Sooke school board. The seven rules are:

- Those students who bring their lunches to school should not be permitted to leave the grounds at noon time.

- No visiting cars should be allowed on the school grounds at noon.

- No students should be permitted to sit in cars at noon.

- All students who take their lunches should be supervised in their classrooms for a 15-minute period at noon.

- Boys and girls should not be permitted to pair off at noon time.

- During the balance of the lunch hour, after lunches have been eaten, boys and girls should be under the supervision of staff members.

- Students are not to leave the grounds while waiting for the school bus.

"The board is responsible for students from the time they get aboard the school bus in the morning until they get off again in the afternoon," Mr. Williams pointed out. "So long as these regulations are just and they don't impose any hardship I don't see any reason for changing them."

NO INCIDENTS

No incidents, similar to those which sparked complaints by parents have occurred at Belmont, Principal A. H. Stephenson said last night.

In a joint statement with the school's student council, Mr. Stephenson said students are concerned over the inference drawn by students in other schools because of the imposition of the rules.

BAD PENNIES

"No one—certainly not these students—deny the presence of 'bad pennies,'" he said. "School regulations and adult laws are made on their account."

"However, because of their presence, it is unwise and unfair to judge the society as a whole by the few who are corrupt."

Mrs. Irene Byers, president of the Greater Victoria Parent-Teacher Council, said last night that some Greater Victoria schools at present restrict children from leaving the school grounds during the lunch hour without their parents' permission.

"That type of rule is pretty well standard everywhere," she said. "I could not understand that they didn't have it in Sooke district."

Superintendent John Gough of the Greater Victoria School Board said no rule has been laid down by the board, covering whether students may leave the school grounds at lunch time.

Artists on Causesway Good Idea, Says Mayor

Proposal of the Victoria Society of Artists to let selected artists paint and sell their works on the Causesway this summer has the approval of Mayor Percy Scurren. He said, "It would be quite a tourist attraction."

Three Small Boys' Honesty Makes Everybody Happy

Three Saanich boys and an old-age pensioner all had cause to rejoice early this week when honesty brought its reward to the youngsters, and did not realize it was gone until he arrived home, along Saanich Road to his home at 3541 Saanich Road, failed to notice $135 mostly in $10s and $20s slipping from an envelope he was carrying, and did not realize it was gone until he arrived home, along Saanich Road to his

The money trail was picked up by Brian and Jimmy Martin, 9 and 7 years old, of 880 Seymour, while on their way home from school.

"At first I thought it was play money," Brian said yesterday, "but when we saw it was real we didn't know what to think, we just picked it up and ran home as fast as we could." Together the lads accounted for $115.

Sharon, their older sister, phoned their parents who suggested phoning the police and the money was returned.

Balance of the money was found and returned by eight-year-old Jim Morgan, 3557 Saanich Road.

Mr. Clarkson called the boys to his home and rewarded them with $2 each for their trouble and honesty.

Deputy health minister Dr. C. F. Amyot attended the meeting to explain the plan in detail and answer questions. It took almost two hours before council decided in favor of joining.

But the vote was not unanimous. Coun. Harold Todd voted against it to allow more time for study and Coun. Leslie Pasmore did not vote at all.

Saanich council last night voted in favor of joining the proposed metropolitan health unit for the southern island area from Salt Spring to Sooke.

Seventeen applications for the job were received and, the mayor said, half a dozen applicants will be interviewed before a choice is made.

Alberni Inlet Monster

'Tzartusaurus' Seen

PORT ALBERNI—"Tzartusaurus" has made an appearance in Alberni Inlet.

A monster with qualities comparable to those of Victoria's Cadborosaurus and Kelowna's Ogopogo, it has been sighted frequently during the past few months by crew and passengers of the Alberni Marine Transportation Ltd. vessel Lady Rose.

Although he has never seen the creature in its entirety, John Monruffet of Marine Transportation said he is certain that it is over 20 feet in length. The color, he said, is not that of a whale or black fish.

The monster appears to inhabit the inlet between Pocahontas Rock and Chup Point. The latter point is close to Tzartus Island. Kildonan residents have also reported seeing Tzartusaurus and one resident of the village said he obtained a clear view of the creature from a plane.

Persons aboard the Lady Rose have sometimes seen Tzartusaurus twice in one day. At other times he does not make an appearance for a period of several days.

The turmoil made by the creature in the water has impressed most of the travellers. While Mr. Monruffet has suggested that there is probably no great mystery surrounding Tzartusaurus' identity, others cling to various theories, some bordering on the fantastic.

North Cowichan Drops Plan To Seize 'Half-Pool' Plot

NORTH COWICHAN—

Prodded by a Supreme Court judgment, North Cowichan council has abandoned plans to expropriate a plot of land on which rests one half of a fire department swimming pool.

Reeve Donald Morton said yesterday the municipality is now prepared to negotiate with the owner of the property for purchase of the land on which the pool intrudes.

The Supreme Court some weeks ago awarded half the pool to Mrs. Hattie Kler, Vancouver, owner of the land.

The judgment ruled out expropriation on the grounds that it was a step launched to remedy the original error of having built the pool in the wrong place.

Reeve Morton said he talked to Mrs. Kler recently and she is prepared to consider an offer for the land.

Council will get an independent evaluation of the property and make an offer on that basis.

The pool was built by North Cowichan Volunteer Fire Department behind its Canada Avenue fire hall.

Deadline for filing an appeal of the Supreme Court judgment was last Monday.

PORT WASHINGTON—Gulf Islands organizations have renewed their plea to the provincial government to take over the existing privately-owned ferry service which plies between the islands' larger ports.

Join Chest Drive Red Cross Urged

A city representative at the annual meeting of the Victoria Red Cross has asked the organization's new executive to consider adding the group with the Greater Victoria Community Chest.

Ald. Michael Griffin said last night he had not made the suggestion in his role as a personal representative to the meeting from the mayor's office but as his own.

He said that insofar as he is able he will try to bring the Red Cross and other large

Chest holdout groups into the community appeal.

He said he believes that Red Cross campaigns would stop falling short of their objectives if the organization would join the Chest, and that Chest campaigns would stop falling short if all the holdouts would join.

New Red Cross president Ernest Heybroek said last night the suggestion has not been considered by the directors, but that it would be if the city requests such a move.

PORT ALBERNI—

Magistrate W. E. MacLeod yesterday postponed judgment in the trial of George Chiffour, a local jeweller, who is charged with possession of stolen goods.

Crown and defence counsel completed their cases yesterday and the magistrate adjourned for a week in order to give himself time in which to prepare a written judgment.

CHIFFOUR, proprietor of George's Jewellers, is free on $1,000 bail pending the outcome of the trial.

He was charged some weeks ago after RCMP seized more than 130 articles of jewellery said to have been stolen elsewhere on Vancouver Island.

CHIFFOUR—Four young men were fined $100 each yesterday in court here for theft of about five gallons of gas from a truck.

Magistrate R. C. Purdy passed sentence after hearing probation reports on Frank Norris, 20, Westholme; Ronald Miles, 20, Cowichan Lake; Stephen W. McKay, 16, and David Thorne, 20, both of Duncan.

They pleaded guilty to the charges a week ago.

DUNCAN—Norman Howarth of Maple Bay has been elected president of Cowichan Branch of the Canadian Red Cross.

Other officers are Rev. Brian Page and Mrs. R. T. Dobell, vice-presidents; Douglas Conn, treasurer, and John Sanders, secretary.

Directors are Robert Vye, Ed Good and F. A. Morton.

A day in the legislature...

SECOND LOOK: Due to face another round of CCF questioning is Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston who yesterday denied that a firm involved in the Sommers bribery case has since then work for the government.

Randolph Harding (CCF-Kaslo-Saanich) asked Mr. Williston on opening day whether Consolidated Services Ltd., C. D. Schultz & Co. Ltd., and C. D. Schultz Appraisal Company Ltd. had received a contract from Mr. Williston's department for work since May 23, 1958.

Mr. Williston replied that no contracts had been given the company.

Charles D. Schultz and his firm of C. D. Schultz & Co. Ltd. were defendants in the Sommers case which saw former lands and forests minister Robert E. Sommers sentenced to five years for bribery.

Both Mr. Schultz and his firm were acquitted on four of the charges with the jury unable to agree on the other five.

Peter Bruton's Capital Notebook

The second round of questioning is in store for Mr. Williston because the Cranbrook Courier of Aug. 18 last said very definitely that C. D. Schultz & Co. Ltd. had received a contract with the department of lands and forests for an inventory and evaluation of forest land along a 106-mile pipeline route.

DANGEROUS ART: Youthful Tony Garraffo, who no longer can qualify as the youngest member of the legislature, said that North Vancouver Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson practices the art of "limbanship."

"This art, he said, involved going out on as long a limb as possible without it breaking or someone seeing it off."

Tony, who represents the Markham riding for the CCF, has given way as the "baby" of the House to fellow CCFer Jim Rhodes of Delta.

MULTIPLE RIDING: The problems of constituents in the far north were brought vividly to light yesterday by Stan Carnell, a former newspaperman who is now Social Credit MLA for South Peace River.

He swore he received this letter from a constituent: "Dear Mr. Carnell: I voted for you three times. We need a new 100-bed hospital in Dawson Creek. What are you doing about it?"

There was a P.S.: "The three times I voted for you was in the 1935 election."

TIMES ARE TOUGH: Labor Minister Leslie Peterson was chiding the CCF for its objections to having foreign capital and foreign investors coming to B.C.

"Why they even object to the poor Swedes coming here," he said.

It was perhaps the most ludicrous description of multi-millionaire Dr. Axel Wenner-Gren ever voiced in the legislature.

THE PEOPLE WRITE: The item we had here about the naming of the new ferry to go on the Swartz Bay-Towasnessen run sparked this letter yesterday:

"I have been shocked into writing this letter. Reading through today's Colonist I realized with mounting horror that I might well have the doubtful pleasure of being conveyed to Vancouver in the future by a vessel bearing the unusual name of 'B.S. Bennett, Queen of the Lake.'"

W. J. Langwith suggested a much more appropriate name would be the S.S. Active Pass.

Area Eyes Skies

Rivers
Rising

DUNCAN — Cowichan residents still in the throes of mopping up after one of the worst winter floods in the district's history are again casting fearful glances at swelling rivers and lowering skies.

Rains which started sporadically two days ago settled down to a steady downpour yesterday and district streams and rivers which forced the evacuation of homes and destroyed roads and bridges two weeks ago started to rise again.

THREE FEET — Highway department officials said the Koksilah River has risen three feet and the Cowichan River only slightly less after more than two inches of rain.

"We are sure worried about it," said Andy Anand, a hard hit Wall subdivision resident who had to evacuate last month.

"We just can't afford it again."

Water in Somenos Creek which flooded the subdivision "couldn't be seen from the house Tuesday but it was flooding yesterday and it is now coming back across the field," he said.

MUD ROCKS — Highway crews are expected to start dumping huge rocks into the Cowichan at Clemmalut Bridge today in an effort to stop erosion. An estimated 80 feet of bank has been torn out.

Rain has fallen in most parts of Cowichan during the last few days and snow has piled up on mountains at Cowichan Lake.

South of the city the Cowichan River was still high and rising in the area where another 20 families evacuated their homes. Dwight Green, the man who warned some of them at 3 a.m. Jan. 15 said he tried to get across the flooded area but the water is too deep.

Already occupants of some houses in the area have had to start mopping-up operations again.

At Clemmalut Bridge delta land has been eaten away to within two feet of a power pole that will likely have to be moved.

Highways officials say that five Indian homes are threatened if the bank is torn away any more. An official has said a breakthrough is possible.

"We're keeping a close watch on it," said Ted Marsh, highways foreman.

STILL CLOSED — In the River Bottom district west of here a 200-yard section of road is still closed where a new channel of the Cowichan broke through and cut into the bank.

The road has a 40-foot drop. It is believed the bank is still giving way and is causing the muddy condition of the river.

North Cowichan Reeve Donold Morton said yesterday the "solution" to flooding lies in a survey made four years ago for the Indian department which suggests a $235,000 relocation of the rivers at Cowichan Bay as well as new roads and bridges.

In a report to council he said a meeting was held recently with officials of senior governments and that they will likely continue with "monthly meetings that may continue for years."

Suicides Fewer In South

Suicide rate is lower on the southern coast of Vancouver Island than in mid Island, health officer Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy said yesterday, but still it's comparatively high.

Health officer Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie of Nanaimo reported Tuesday that the mid Island rate last year was 18 per 100,000 persons. This, he said, was twice as high a rate as Ontario's and nine times as high as Newfoundland's.

Greater Victoria, Dr. Mahaffy said, had 16 recorded suicides last year among its 132,000 residents, for a rate of slightly more than 10 per 100,000.

But, like Dr. Mackenzie, she had no definite reason to offer for the high rate. Many theories exist, Dr. Mackenzie said, "but they are just theories."

New School, New Equipment

Special microscope which will project slides onto a large screen so they can be clearly seen by an entire class was one of the major attractions for Grade 7 student Barbara Hansen yesterday when she and 225 other North Cowichan students moved into new Mount Prevost Junior High School near Duncan. Reluctant Debutante Looks Like Success

By BERT BENNY

An evening of gay entertainment is planned for Duncan Elementary School either Friday or Saturday evening when Duncan Little Theatre presents Douglas Home's pleasant satirical comedy, "The Reluctant Debutante."

A preview revealed a lot of sparkling comedy, a dedicated cast which gave every appearance of being happy in the several parts and, mostly in Act II, a welcome and essential vitality so frequently lacking in similar productions.

Success of the play depends largely on comparison between characters similarly situated; between two terribly sophisticated society matrons, between two easy-on-the-eyes daughters whom they dangle all over Mayfair as bait for young men and on two of the young men themselves. Herein this production achieves much.

Virginia Lefever played Jane Broadbent deftly, effectively and always with an air of refreshing independence. Virginia inspires confidence and excites interest.

Brian Norman as David Bullock gave a delightful characterization as did Jack Kostrow as David Hoylake Johnson.

Will Jackson was consistently entertaining as Jimmie Broadbent.

Directed by John Bargas, the play would have been much improved by rearrangement of the set.

It goes on Friday and Saturday at 8.15 and is sponsored by the Duncan's Lions' Club. The proceeds from a good show go a good cause, that in aid of retarded children.

North Cowichan

Council Takes Dim View Of Low Land for School

NORTH COWICHAN — Council is taking a dim view of plans to build a private school on land which Reeve Daniel Morton believes would make a good rice paddy.

The land is between Lakes Road and Alexander School over which Somenos Creek overflowed Jan. 15 forcing some 20 nearby residents to evacuate their homes.

USE OF PROPERTY

Council approved the subdivision of 1.9 acres of land owned by Thunderbird Industries Ltd. but added "use of the property for construction of a school cannot be confirmed."

Reeve Morton said he understood part of the land was to be sold for construction of a private school.

He added that if a building permit was asked for a school the municipality would point out that the floor level would have to be elevated and that a 265-foot drain of 18-inch cement tile costing $314 would have to be built along Beverley to ensure drainage.

NOT SUITABLE

"Surely we can refuse a subdivision if the ground is not suitable," said Coun. Tony Staples. "I think it would be kinder to turn down the request."

But Reeve Morton said that according to the municipal zoning bylaw council cannot refuse the subdivision of land.

He added the ground would be "ideal for rice" or "market gardening."

RELIEF FUND

At the same meeting Coun. Staples was appointed to meet with a Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce committee to handle the flood relief fund.

A list of accounts passed for payment showed the municipality spent $301 for emergency accommodation for 13 evacuated families two weeks ago.

PRODUCTION VALUE

The value of production in Sweden's engineering industry in 1960 totalled more than $3,000,000,000, a record high.

Nanaimo Zoo

Nudging Lions In Day's Work

By CHARLES THOMPSON

NANAIMO — City living doesn't teach a man how to make a snarling, 600-pound African lion move over so its den can be washed.

But former Vancouver electrical contractor Dan Dettwiler has learned the hard way, "and believe me, it took some doing."

"The thing is not to let them know you are scared," said the manager of Nanaimo Zoological Gardens Ltd., six miles north of here.

"Still, I'm pretty careful and don't turn my back on any of them."

NEAR DEFUNCT

He invested money in the near-defunct zoo last summer "after reading in the paper that former owner-manager Paul Hertel was being forced to close by the government."

Hertel's troubles started when a lion broke loose and killed a child.

"After that even Lloyds of London wouldn't give the zoo insurance," said Mr. Dettwiler. Later, when he assumed management of it, "they wanted an extra 15 per cent in premiums."

Mr. Dettwiler said his problems as a zoo operator are far from over, but that so far he has been able to solve them as he went along.

One of his first problems when he took over last summer dealt with suitable diets for the zoo's wildlife population.

He said he read every book on the feeding of lions, tigers and cougars that he could get his hands on and that no two of them agreed. Finally, by trial and error, he surmounted that problem and today the animals' sleek appearance testifies to the success of his solution.

MOST URGENT

His most urgent problem today is the need for more and better buildings for the zoo's impressive collection of animals.

His company is reluctant to construct the buildings on the present site because it does not own the land.

"We need more capital," he said.

Strike Curbs Likely

By PETER BRUTON

Tougher labor legislation will be introduced by the provincial government later this session, Labor Minister Leslie Peterson indicated yesterday.

Observers believe the legislation will include provisions cancelling the payroll check-off of union dues and steps to make it harder for unions to strike and employers to lock out.

BOTH SIDES

Mr. Peterson, speaking on labor-management relations, told the legislature there were activities on the part of both employers and unions that were not conducive to harmonious relations.

"Other activities unduly restrict the freedom of the individual and, in our view, violate his basic democratic rights," said the minister. "In certain instances, some degree of corrective action is within the authority of this legislature, and legislation covering these and other matters will be placed before you for your consideration as early as possible."

FIRM OPINION

The minister, who took over the department after the defeat of former minister Lyle Wicks in the last election, said he was firmly of the opinion there should be as little government interference as was compatible with the public welfare.

"However, we have a responsibility to every individual whether he is a member of a union or not," said Mr. Peterson. "We will not shirk from our own responsibility to protect the basic and democratic rights of a free people."

MORE SPECIFIC

CCF members in the opposition asked the minister to be more specific about what the legislation would entail but he refused to do so.

"I know the opposition will try to misinterpret any legislation brought in about labor," said Mr. Peterson. "Just as they misinterpreted the Labor Relations Act."

"But we will be fair to labor, we will be fair to management, we will be fair to the public of this province," he said.

STACY STAND

There has been widespread speculation that more labor legislation would be introduced since former agriculture minister Newton Stacy told a delegation of farmers that Bill 43 (Trade Unions Act) was "just the beginning" and that "tougher laws were being planned."

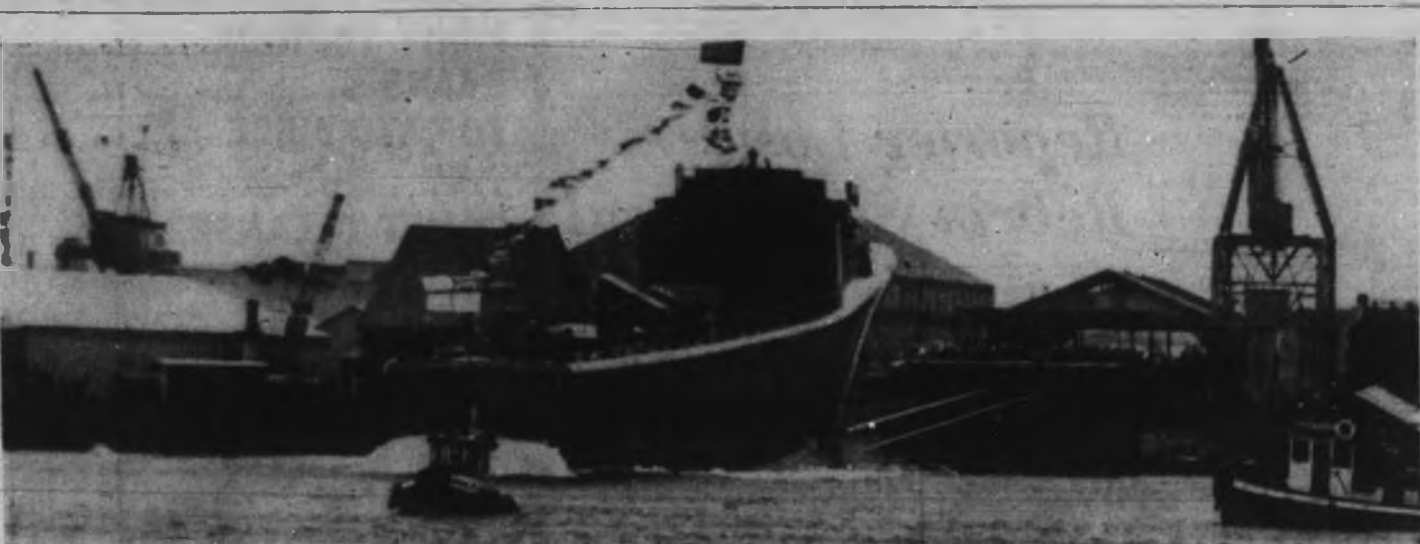

At that time Premier Bennett denied the Social Credit government had ever passed any legislation which hurt the working man.

GREAT MISTAKE

Mr. Peterson said yesterday there was bound to be a conflict of interest between labor and management but it was a great mistake to assume that labor and management must always have diametrically opposed interests and that unions and management should be engaged in a class war.

"Those who perpetuate class warfare between labor and management are doing a very great disservice to the people of B.C.," he said.

HIT-RUN DRIVER LEAVES BROKEN BODY IN GUTTER

Clue Hidden In Clothing?

A bundle of torn and bloodstained clothing may hold the only clue to the identity of a hit-run driver who last night took the life of Victoria's second 1961 traffic death victim.

The broken body of 83-year-old Hubert H. Hollier, 2336 Lee, was left lying in the gutter along rain-slick Fort Street 100 feet west of Trent.

NO WITNESSES

Up to early this morning police had found no eyewitnesses to the fatal accident.

Examination of the road surface failed to produce any telltale shattered headlight glass or other evidence.

Police are pinning their hopes on the conscience of the driver and, failing that, the possibility that microscopic flakes of the death-car's paint may be imbedded in the victim's clothing.

HUBERT H. HOLLIER
... witness sought

BOTTLE OF BRANDY

Ironically, Hollier was on his way to buy a bottle of medicinal brandy which he needed to combat a heart condition.

Police said that if he was in the nearest pedestrian lane when struck he was bowled and dragged some 100 feet by the fleeing car.

First report of the fatal accident was received by city police from Mrs. Lloyd Briggs, 1958 Fort, who lives just a few feet from where Hollier's body was found a few minutes before 6 p.m.

HEARD A THUD

"We were sitting in the living room when we heard a thud and a roaring car engine," she said.

Her husband looked out the window, saw the victim's lifeless form on the wet street and called to his wife to telephone police. He failed to catch sight of the vehicle.

Within seconds an all-points police bulletin covering the Victoria to Campbell River portion of Vancouver Island flashed out over police radio frequencies.

SEVERELY HAMPERS

But from the outset police were severely hampered by lack of any description of the vehicle.

Service stations were alerted in the Greater Victoria area to watch for a vehicle bearing fresh front-end damage but with headlights probably still intact.

Employees of at least three stores in the shopping centre across the street said they saw or heard nothing during a driving rainstorm when the accident happened.

ON LOOKOUT

Police Chief John Blackstock said "every man in the street is looking for the car and driver. We are trying not to leave a single loop-hole—this man is a killer and must be found."

Traffic officers also appealed to anyone who may have seen the 5:45 p.m. accident. They are asked to telephone EV 4-4111.

"Anyone can have an accident—but let's hope this driver has the guts to own up to it," said the chief.

The fatal accident was the second in Victoria during the past week. William Mendres died Jan. 28 after being struck by a fire truck while driving at Johnson and Quadra, Jan. 27.

Hull Enters Her Element

Last Ship Contract Slides into Sea

By IAN STREET

The shipbuilding industry on the west coast is in danger of "disintegrating overnight" because there is no work to keep skilled craftsmen here, Harold

Husband, president of Victoria Machinery Depot, said here yesterday.

If this is allowed to happen, Mr. Husband told guests assembled for the launching of the new destroyer escort Saskatchewan at VMD, the task of rebuilding the industry "will be a long and arduous one."

NO WORK IN HAND

He said the yard—"one of the most efficient shipbuilding organizations in Canada"—has no shipbuilding work in hand when the Saskatchewan moves to Yarrows Ltd. in a few weeks for its completion.

"We can't like Mr. Micawber, wait for something to turn up," said Mr. Husband. "We are encouraged by the decision of the B.C. government to build a third ferry."

and the recently announced new federal shipbuilding program.

NEED HELP NOW

"But we on the west coast need help now... and if we are to keep our best men working we must have ships to build."

A spray of champagne mixed with driving rain as Mrs. H. S. Rayner, wife of the chief naval staff, triggered the launching apparatus.

For a long minute, as invited guests crowded to the rail of the launching platform, the hull refused to budge on the ways. Then, as VMD crews swung into action, compressed air rams nudged the Saskatchewan into motion.

Spectators cheered the naval band played "Hearts of Oak," as the vessel, wearing a red undercoat of paint, and gaily decked with flags, slid smoothly down to the sea.

NORTH PACIFIC

Vice-Admiral H. S. Rayner, chief of naval staff, told shivering guests and officials the chill winds and driving rain represented "typical North Pacific weather." He said Canada's shipyards are an "essential link" that keeps the R.C.N. combat-ready.

The admiral said the Saskatchewan and five others like her now being built elsewhere in Canada, are basically the same as the Restigouche class destroyer escorts.

PROVED ABILITY

"These ships were designed and built to meet the threat of the modern submarine," said Admiral Rayner. "They have proved in exercises with live submarines their ability to do just that."

Mr. Husband said that in recent years VMD has spent $1,000,000 on new plants and thousands more dollars on training men for diversification of its operations. But he pointed out that of six B.C. shipyards that together built more than 50 per cent of Canada's wartime shipping, only two now remain in operation.

Access Solution Seen

Forest Firms May Lift Gates

By ALEC MERRIMAN

More and better public access to Vancouver Island forest areas by next summer appeared likely yesterday as developments pointed toward better understanding between logging companies, the government and the public.

Elk River Timber Co. told the Colonist it will take an immediate second look at the problem of public access over its section of the road to Gold River and Muchalat Arm on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood said he put wheels in motion yesterday to organize a series of roundtable meetings between principals concerned to discuss the access question on a sensible basis and find a solution of mutual advantage.

A recent change in the upper level management of Scott Paper Co., which controls Elk River Timber, gives hope for a better understanding and more amiable negotiation on public access.

The special deputy minister's committee, under chairmanship of deputy lands minister E. W. Bassett, which has been set up to study and recommend on access problems, has at last settled down to intensified serious meetings. Three meetings have been held in the last week.

Recreation Minister Westwood said he will drive deeply into the access problem when he speaks Friday in the Throne Speech debate in the legislature.

News of the Elk River Timber Company's second look at access from Campbell River to the west coast was given exclusively to the Colonist by WINNIPEG (CP) — George All they had to do was sign one form. Investigation found the form was a cheque. Police said the salesman cashed the cheques immediately. Thompson, a housewares firm salesman, Tuesday was sentenced to six months in jail after pleading guilty to 16 charges of fraud.

Let Gibson Stay Kiernan Decides

Mines Minister Kenneth Kiernan yesterday withdrew a request for the legislature to consider allegations of government graft and corruption leveled in a pre-session speech by North Vancouver Liberal MLA Gordon Gibson.

"I have not the slightest desire in any way to prevent the second member from North Vancouver from either sitting or speaking in this House," said the minister in a prepared statement read to the House.

"My opinion is that my protest has been registered," he said, "without attempting to anticipate the action of your self or this House in any way. Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the second member for North Vancouver be heard in this House in due course and that no action be taken by this House that would prevent the member from being heard."

STORM AT UBC

The storm arose Tuesday when Mr. Kiernan referred to published reports of a speech made by Mr. Gibson at the University of B.C. last week in which he was quoted as saying that he would bare graft in the government, including the mines department.

The member, who resigned his seat for Lillooet in 1955 after his famous "money talks" speech in the legislature, faced a possible penalty of being jailed for the remainder of the session over his recent remarks.

NO DISCREDIT

Mr. Gibson told the legislature Tuesday night he had not intended to personally discredit the minister nor the civil servants in this department.

Crash Pilot Drinking?

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) —

A 24-year-old halfback said yesterday he thought one of the pilots had been drinking before the crash of an Arctic Pacific C-46 that killed 22 persons including 17 members of the California Polytechnic football team. His testimony was contradicted by a stewardess.

Pirates Free Captives Today Mutiny, Hunger New Threats

RECIFE, Brazil (UPI) — Captive passengers aboard the hijacked cruise ship "Santa Maria" shouted to passing boats that their Portuguese pirate captors would land them today, just before their fresh water supply gives out.

Shortage of food and water aboard the broiling hot vessel, the threat of mutiny by the crew and growing official impatience over rebel demands for guarantees that they can keep the ship pointed to a final settlement today of the 12-day increasing odyssey from the Spanish Main to this tropical port just south of the equator.

New Brazilian President Janio Quadros sent a message to pirate chief Henrique Galvao late last night. Word in Rio De Janeiro was that Quadros, who has granted the rebels asylum if they want it, might also let them leave Recife unmolested with the ship if the 620 passengers and all of the 350 crewmen desiring to disembark are first put ashore.

The U.S. navy declared the ship was in Brazilian waters and said it was withdrawing from the chase, leaving the fate of the liner and passengers up to Brazil.

The Santa Maria was at the mouth of Recife harbor, three miles off shore.

Brazil said the U.S. could take the 42 Americans off at sea, but the navy said this was too risky in the ground swell.

Misfire Saved Mountie

CLOVERDALE (CP) — An RCMP officer said Wednesday that, during a struggle with a suspect who had his revolver, he heard the gun hammer click but the weapon did not discharge.

Const. R. W. R. Smith was testifying at preliminary hearing of a charge of attempted murder against John Duncan Stewart, 36. Stewart was committed for trial.
